The Odd Fellows Widows and Orphan's Association have called for an assessment, the second since May, 1883.

The steamer Kinston came in yesterday evening with cotton, naval stores, eggs, shad, and a large, dressed wild turkey nailed to her flag-pole.

The building of the vaults in the new court house has created the impression among some that a State bank is to be opened here, and that the vaults are to hold the money.

A survey, called for the purpose of appraising, has decided that it will require four hundred and fifty dollars to repair the damage done to the schooner Varina in the late collision.

The board of city council was in session last night for the purpose of con-fering with A. E. Woodruff, Esq., in regard to the trust fund, held by him as Trustee, for Cedar Grove cemetery.

The inauguration people have returned, minus two overcoats, an unmistakable evidence of the activity of the pick-pockets, or pick-backs, of Washington City. They all report a glorious time, but not one has shown his commission for an office.

Two cases of disorderly conduct before the Mayor yesterday; they were fined two dollars each and cost. One case for leaving dray on streets contrary to ordinance, judgment suspended on payment of costs; and one for having chicken coop on sidewalk was fined one dollar and cost.

Will the News and Observer publish the names of the committee that worked up the judicial district bill? The Democrats of Craven county want them to file away for future reference, say about four years hence, and then they should be placed "in the archives of gravity."

We request our readers to read the article under the caption "Church Etiquette." It is timely, and if it does not have the desired effect then we think the ministers of the different churches could devote a few minutes on the subject, some Sunday when there is a full house, very profitably.

Died.
Mrs. Geo. W. Simmons, of Pollock-ville, died yesterday. Funeral services to-day at 2 o'clock from the residence.

Jones county, are in the city.

Quinney arrived on the steamer Kinston yesterday evening.

Mr. W. P. Barrus is off to Hyde county on a business trip.

Messrs. J. F. Parrot, C. S. Wooten, Arnold Borden, J. C. Wooten and Col.
Paul Faison, Directors of the A. & N. C.
Railroad, are in the city and will attend the regular meeting of Directors to-day.

Plain Questions.
Mythical ideas are fanning the public brow with the breath of prejudice, ignorance and humbuggery. Have you the remotest idea that your scrofula was created by the use of potash and mercury? No matter what the cause, B. B.
B. is the peer of all other remedies. Do you presume that your troublesome catarrh is the result of mineral poisoning?
B. B. B. is the quickest remedy. Are your chronic ulcers and boils and sores the result of potash and mercury?
Medical gentlemen will not tell you so, but B. B. B. is the only sovereign remedy. Were your terrible kidney troubles created by mineral poisoning? Not a bit of it, but B. B. B. has proven to be a reliable remedy. Are your skin diseases, your eczema, dry tetter, etc., the effect of too much potash and mercury? The medical profession are the best judges, and they say, B. B. B. makes more pronounced cures than all other preparations combined.

A TERRIFIC FIRE IN NEW BERNE

Loss $100,000; About $50,000 Covered by Insurance.

At a little after 12 o'clock this morning the howling of dogs and uproar in the streets admonished those who were awake that something exciting was going on. Those familiar with such alarms were satisfied that fire was the cause and began to prepare for the conflict. In a few minutes the fire alarm was sounded and the engines with the usual promptitude responded.

The fire originated in the frame store occupied by Messrs. Smith & Credle as a stove and tinware establishment owned by Mrs. S. A. Churchill, on Middle street, three doors from the corner of South Front.

The flames are supposed to have started in the upper portion of the building, and was well underway when the steamers were in position to turn on a stream.

The Button engine took position at a well near the fire on Middle street, and the Silsby went to the river, at the foot of the same street. Owing to the character of the buildings in the immediate vicinity, the fire spread in a fan-shape both right and left, extending to the brick building of Mr. J. T. Hall, on South Front street, and up to what is known as the Bishop building, also brick, on Middle street. For three hours the raging flames raged with a maddened fury that seemed to defy all efforts to dispute their angry march.
Fortunately the center of the square, bounded by Middle, South Front, Craven and Pollock streets, contained no buildings of importance, being the concentration of a number of gardens and back lots, which rendered a natural terminus to the consuming element in that direction, but the progress on the front of Middle and South Front streets was appalling in velocity and unerring certainty.

Early in the fearful conflict the well at which the Button engine was placed became temporarily exhausted, and a removal became necessary, at a very critical moment. From the new position at the dock the distance and the force necessary to rench the fire in its upward march, was so great that the hose burst and a second more become necessary, and position was taken at the bored well on Craven street near the Atlantic's quarters, where it remained.

The fine fiend leaped with apparent eagerness into both brick and frame buildings, devouring them each alike.
The brick building of J. T. Hall, although burned out, yet saved the low frame offices on the eastern side of it, while the brick building of W. H. Pearce, on the corner, aided by its sheltering walls, while on fire, prevented spreading the flames across the street in either direction, and at the northern terminus of the conflagration the brick structure rendered a similar aid in the arrest of its progress.

The firemen worked with their usual energy and will, and rendered heroic service and deserve the highest praise for their devotion to duty, although during the excitement severe criticism upon the management of the department was freely uttered by many.

The following are the losses and insurance as far as could be ascertained before going to press.

Mistaken Again.

"Henrico" comes at us as though we get no news only from the Northern papers. In this he is greatly mistaken.
Most of the news he reads in his Northern papers has been read and digested in New Berne at least twenty-four hours before he gets his papers from the North, and if he would subscribe for one of those enterprising papers, the Star or News and Observer, he would not grumble so much about not getting his Northern mail. He says we had to wait for the Northern papers to get the President's address. Why bless your soul we had it in type twenty-four hours before the New York papers containing it reached here. Probably we had better explain how we got it. The Wilmington and Raleigh dailies arrive here on the same evening they are issued. From their telegraphic columns we have time to get news for our issue of the next morning. But if the train waited at Goldsboro for the fast mail it would be past midnight before it reached New Berne, so we would be unable to give the "latest news."

As to "Henrico's" finding things in the JOURNAL that he had read in Northern papers a week before, we can easily account for that. He is not a subscriber to the JOURNAL but picks up an old issue occasionally at the hotel and thinks it's just from the press.

But joking aside, if we understand "Henrico," and we think we do now, he is only complaining of the conductors of the A. & N. C. Railroad for not waiting for the regular Northern mail when it is behind, and we agree with him, that they should wait provided there is not too much delay. We think they ought to wait even as much as three or four hours, and we are of the opinion that they sometimes do wait, especially when they know there are passengers for this end of the road. As for the "fast mail" train it is a humbug and ought to be discontinued. The money spent for it should be spent in facilitating mails through the country.

Church Etiquette.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—It is a custom in the churches of our city for young people, and especially ladies, to remain sitting at the entrance or end of the pews they occupy, and force those who come later to crowd past them to get the vacant sittings in the pew.
On last Sunday, in one of our churches, an elderly gentleman—a deacon of a sister church—was obliged to crowd past a lady—who insisted on occupying the first sitting in the pew—and seat himself between this lady and another.
This is a common occurrence in our churches. Now for a lady to thus oblige a gentleman to squeeze past her in a narrow pew, instead of herself moving up, and giving him her seat, is certainly neither polite nor modest.

The writer well remembers—many years ago, when a young man in New York—listening to Doctor E. H. Chapin on this subject of "church etiquette"— and has never forgotten the impression then made on his mind. Dr. Chapin's was one of the most popular and attractive chapters in the city for many years, and the congregation, a very rich one, were noted for their politeness and courtesy to strangers. It has always been the custom in such churches as Doctor Deems', Taylor's, Hall's, and other wealthy city churches, for the owners of pews who have vacant sittings, to take their seats at the extreme end of their pews, and leave those at the entrance for strangers, or those who should come late.

Would it not be well for our people to cultivate a little of this church etiquette?

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

(Journal of Commerce.)

It is in no sense partisan, and is filled with broad catholic views of the true principles of government, and the spirit in which the duties of the Chief Executive should be undertaken and discharged. The President accepts the office as a sacred trust, and his only anxiety is that the great interests thus confided to him shall not suffer at his hands.

It is refreshing to hear once more such ringing words of devotion to the Constitution and the solemn pledge that it is to be interpreted in the spirit which governed in its first adoption.

(New York Sun.)

These are the points of Mr.
Cleveland's inaugural. It is very well written. There is nothing new, or original, or brilliant about it; but the passage relating to economical government and a plain mode of living will be welcomed with satisfaction by a great portion of the people; and there is no doubt that the whole document expresses plainly and sincerely the ideas and purposes of its author.

(Augusta Chronicle.)

It is in the man behind the address which gives it character and power. Uttered with the candor and courage which President Cleveland carries to the White House, yesterday's inaugural address possesses more meaning than the delivery of a Lord Chancellor or an essay by John Stuart Mill. It embodies the eloquence of truth.

(Petersburg Index-Appel.)

President Cleveland's inaugural address, like all his previous public utterances, was brief and to the point, and, as usual, was marked by a pervading sense of the grave responsibilities which his new office devolves upon him. His utterances are clear and easily understood, and so far as he gives expression to his views upon different points of public policy, there is no mistaking his intentions.

(New York World.)

President Cleveland's Inaugural Address is in keeping with the papers he has from time to time been called upon to lay before the people in his official capacity and with all his public utterances since the election. He says what he has to say in plain language, unembel-lished by rhetorical flourishes, but terse and trenchant, leaving no doubt as to its meaning and impressing the reader with the conviction that it comes from the heart. Earnest, unpretending, sincere and vigorous, the Inaugural partakes of the character of the Man.

(Norfolk Landmark.)

In style, as in matter, the address was worthy the grand occasion, and we congratulate all classes, black and white, on the new era ushered in yesterday in the city which bears the name of the Father of his Country.

(Charleston News & Courier.)

The inaugural address of President Cleveland is so weighty in thought and so condensed in expression that it is impracticable to lay it before the public in any simpler or more suggestive form.
It breathes throughout a spirit of responsibility and a sense of duty which will compel the assent and co-operation of the American people.

(Baltimore American, Rep.)

It is a carefully drawn paper, modest and reserved, as becomes the occasion, and yet upon the main points is clear, definite and decided.
The only point on which the sound is uncertain is as to the tariff.

There is no indication in the inaugural address that "offensive partisanship" shall be ground for removal. This is a matter, however, not settled by a phrase. Beyond doubt President Cleveland has now the intention of carrying out Civil Service Reform in good faith; but the pressure that will be brought to bear upon him to remove persons chargeable with "offensive partisanship" will be very great.

The Northern Mails.

STREET'S HOTEL, KINSTON, N. C., March 7, 1885.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—From your comments on the piece written by me, it looks as if you don't want your mail; and yet you have to wait for that very mail to publish the President's address, as you say in said paper you could not make arrangements with the telegraph company to get the address. And from that remark I think you need the mail as much, if not more, than I do. The rule you say, I must make for the W.
& W. Railroad, won't work, for the reason that the W. & W. are not like the A. & N. C. Railroad; they don't make schedules to leave their depot whether or not the rest of the railroads are on time. They don't, like a little mouse in a large corn bin, think they own the world, but run their road for passengers, mails, etc. If you will go back to the W. & W. starting point, you will find them waiting for the P. & W., and go to the P. & W. and you will find them waiting for the R. & P., go on back and you will find the R. & P. waiting for the Washington train, the Washington train waiting for the Baltimore train, the Baltimore train waiting for the Philadelphia train, and the Philadelphia train waiting for the New York train. And now you see if all these connecting railroads were like our little short line—had their leaving time, as the A. & N. C. Railroad, I am afraid you would have to wait a long time to print your President's address, whereas, if all left at the very minute from each of those depots, as the A. & N. C. does, I for one don't know when we would get our mail; and I suppose those trains bring most of the A. & N. C.'s passengers. I agree with you about the management of the road; can see it doing better than I ever saw it, but think the business men of Kinston and New Berne ought to have their Northern mails, and you ought to have yours, as I frequently see things in your paper that I have read a week before in other papers, and if you had your mails more promptly this would not be the case. I am sure. Wishing your paper and the railroad much success, also Northern mails, I am, Respectfully, HENRICO.

FISHER.—At Clarksville, Tenn., January 20, 1885, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Rhodes, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Fisher, widow of the late Samuel C. Fisher, of New Orleans, quietly fell asleep in Jesus. Mrs. Fisher was eighty years old, and a native of North Carolina.

The above notice of the death of Mrs.
Elizabeth J. Fisher may recall to the minds of some of our older inhabitants Miss Betsey Webber, a native of New Berne. She left here many years ago and lived in New Orleans, whence she removed to Clarksville, Tennessee.
