Harper's Magazine, ILLUSTRATED.

With the new volume, beginning in December, Harper's Magazine will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine making.

Harper's Periodicals. PER YEAR: HARPER'S MAGAZINE, $4 00; HARPER'S WEEKLY, 1 00; HARPER'S BAZAR, 1 00; HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, 2 00; HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY, One Year (24 Numbers), 10 00.

The volumes of the Magazine begin with the numbers for June and December of each year. No new volume is published, it will be understood, until the subscriber wishes to begin with the current number.

The last eleven Semi-Annual Volumes of Harper's Magazine, in neat cloth binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of 25¢ per volume. Cloth Cases for binding, in single sets, by mail, postpaid.

Remittances should be made by Post-Office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss. Newspapers are not to copy this advertisement without the express order of Harper & Brothers.

Address HARPER & BROTHERS, New York.

Faithful to his Word. An interesting circumstance is related of George G. Lake, the benevolent merchant of New York, whose death has been recently reported. Like so many others, he came to the great city from Connecticut a poor lad, and obtained employment as an errand-boy in a store in Catherine Street, a narrow thoroughfare leading to the East River.

He was an errand-boy of the old-fashioned kind, one who received two dollars a week wages, slept on or under the counter of the store, and lived chiefly on crackers and cheese. But he was a good boy, attended to business and made friends. In a year or two he obtained a better place, in a better store, in a better street, where he advanced rapidly from one post to another until at nineteen he was placed in charge of the silk department, the highest position in the store.

Salaries at that period were so small, that this smart young man thought himself lucky in getting four hundred dollars a year and, he engaged to remain for four years in the service of the firm at that rate of wages.

As head of the silk counters he had frequently to visit a great importing house to replenish the stock of his own firm, and there he attracted notice by his excellent taste in selecting silks, and his sound judgment as to what patterns would be likely to please customers.

One day he was asked to step in the counting-room of the importing house, where one of the partners invited him to enter their service at a thousand dollars the first year, two thousand dollars the second, and three thousand dollars afterwards. The young man replied that he had just made a contract with his employers for four years at eight dollars a week.

"That contract was only verbal, I suppose," said the merchant. "I don't break contracts," replied the clerk, "whether they be verbal or not."

So he went back to his silks in the old store, and to his eight dollars a week. He served out his four years faithfully. At the end of the period he had made himself the indispensable man to his employers, who offered him ten thousand dollars a year or a partnership. He accepted the salary, and, after some years, entered the firm, of which in due time, by the retirement of his partners, he became the head.

He made a large fortune in the business, from which he retired at an early age and spent the remainder of his days in happy and honorable retirement, a good patriot, a good Christian, and a wisely benevolent man. The solace and charm of his old age was music, of which he was a warm lover and a munificent patron.—Youth's Companion.

A Maine farmer had a wife who declared she would never be weighed One day when she was in the wagon he drove his team on to the hay scales in Auburn and had the whole thing weighed without his wife knowing what was going on. The he afterwards came back and had the team weighed without his wife, and found it just 225 pounds lighter. So he had his way and she had her weigh.—Lovell Courier.
