He Writes a Letter.

Many of our citizens remember how active was Maj. George Credle while living in the city. Well, he purchased a large farm in Hyde, where there was a demand for all his energies, but he has actually taken time to write a letter to a newspaper, and pens the following to the Economist:

LAKE COMFORT, N. C., May 15. Mr. Entron:—I wish to call attention through the Economist, which circulates largely among our people, to the condi-tion of the courthouse building of Hyde county, at Swan Quarter. We have little doubt that it is the smallest, most uncomfortable and most contemptible courthouse in North Carolina. It is wrestle in. It has no Sheriff's room and no accommodation for witnesses, jurors, suitors or lawyers. The lawyers are huddled up in a little pen and would have to set in each other's lapa to be comfortable. They have to fire at the jury from a blind that they cant see out of, and have to peep round a crowd to see how the jurors take a point. The witnesses have so crawl over the heads of the jurors and get on the bench with the juage before they can be seen and then they are hoisted so high up over the heads of everybody that they are half-frightened to death and don't know what they are talking about. We saw one witness stand trembling like a leaf and he called a mule a calf and in trying to correct the mistake he called the animal a cow, and never could get right. The courthouse is a disgrace to Hyde county and every man and woman in it. You'd think, to look at the courthouse, there wan't enough money in the county to pay for a gingercake, but they ought to be ashamed of them-saives to let such an old rat trap stay like it is. A TERRIBLE OCCURRENCE.

Suicide of Mr. William H. Crow. W. H. Crow, Esq., one of the most highly esteemed citizens of Raleigh, has for some days been suffering from derangement of mind. Yesterday evening he was missed and it was learned that Penjdeh to Russia a fatal error on the for some days been suffering from de-rangement of mind. Yesterday evening he was missed and it was learned that he had purchased a pistol during the evening. The most vigorous search was immediately instituted, with the result that the dead body of the unfortunate gentleman was found this morning at 9 o'clock, in a ravine back of Capt. R. H. Brooks' residence, and scuthwest of Oakwood cemetery, the case being evi-dently one of suicide with the newly purchased pistol. Mr. Crow left home at 4:30. Mr. C. C. Crow, his son, followed him, thinking he had gone to his office. This was not the case. He went into the store and purchased a new 32-calibre revolver and three cartridges. When found, he was lying between two small ditches and near a clump of willows. He had apparently kneeled, and placing the revolver near his right temple had fired. The ball penetrated the head at about the level of the eye, and apparently caused instant death, as there were no evidences of a struggle. Mr. Crow had fallen backward with his knees bent under his body. His hands had fallen by his side and the revolver lay upon his breast. Mr. Crow was dressed in a suit of black and wore a dressed in a suit of black and wore a grey beaver. His clothing was wet with the heavy rain which had fallen in the early morning. The body was found by a little colored boy. anywise embarrassed. He was a man of means.

Mr. Crow was 69 years of age. He was born in the town of Louisburg. For a number of years he lived in Petersburg, Va. He had resided here for about twenty-five years. He was a prominent member of the First Presbyterian church. A year ago he had an attack of paralysis, and since then his health had failed. Some weeks ago he had an attack of sickness. Under those strains his mind had given way, weakening greatly in the past few days.

It is not known at what hour the suicide was committed. There were many searching parties out, and all parts of the city and its suburbs were examined. At 10 o'clock persons living near the scene heard a pistol shot, but paid no particular attention to it. At about 12:30 o'clock this morning the chief of police and some searchers heard another shot, while in that vicinity.—

Beware of Mercury and Potash. Mercury is more destructive to human health and life than war, pestilence and famine combined. So said a distinguished writer many years ago, and it is as true today as then. The poor vic-tim of Blood Disease is drugged with Mercury to cure the malady, and then dosed with Iodides to cure him of the Mercurial Poisoning; but instead of any relief, the first breaks down his general health and makes him a cripple, and is as true today as then. The poor vic Mercury and Potash are dangerous even when administered by directions and under the eye of a good physician, and when put up in nostrums, often by incompetent persons are apt to produce evil consequences. The Theatre Tonight.

The citizens of New Berne know how to appreciate a good thing. They know, too, that when the children of our graded school prepare an entertainment it is first class. Special pains have been taken to make the one at the theatre tonight worthy of a good audience. The proceeds are to be applied to the improvement of the Academy grounds which every citizen of New Berne should take a pride in beautifying. It has been a long time since we have had an entertainment of this sort, and we bespeak a large audience to night.
