THE JOURNAL.

NEW BERNE, N. C., MAY 23, 1885.

The Cow-Tree

This singular and really wonderful tree is thus spoken of in Myers' "Life and Nature Under the Tropics," as the author saw it growing in Venezuela. He says: "The most interesting form of vegetation and one that flourishes abundantly through the rugged mountain wilds, is the famous palo de vaca or 'cow-tree.' From it is obtained, by incisions made in the trunk, a milky juice, sweet and agreeable to the taste, and which is considerably used as food by the natives. It furnishes an exceedingly nutritious food.

"The tree attains a great height, the coriaceous leaves being from six to ten inches in length. The wood is red, very hard and durable. The fluid is put at Paris upon the Amazon to various uses. When applied fresh from the tree as a glue, the milky sap hardens and holds with greater durability than the ordinary cabinet-maker's glue. It also makes good custard."

"Amid the great number of curious phenomena," says Humboldt, "which I have observed in the course of my travels, I confess there are few that have made so powerful an impression on me as the cow-tree."

There is, indeed, something peculiarly impressive in this remarkable tree, which will not be obliterated from the mind of the traveller by the many other wonders of the equatorial regions that may come under his observation. That there should be a tree mysteriously elaborating a substance devoid of all acidity or bitterness, or any of the deleterious qualities usually belonging to lactescent plants, and which is, moreover, a delicious and wholesome aliment, is no less a remarkable fact than a beneficent provision for the inhabitants of a country who rely mainly upon the natural resources of the land for supplying their wants.

The Atlanta Constitution.

In a long article, relating to the B. B. of that city, says: "The Blood Balm Company started one year ago with $123.00, but today the business cannot be bought for $50,000! The demand and the satisfaction given is said to be without a parallel as its action is pronounced wonderful."

We are glad to announce that our druggists have already secured a supply, and we hope our readers will supply themselves at once.

It is said to be the only speedy and permanent blood poison remedy offered, giving entire satisfaction in all cases before one bottle has been used. For Blood Diseases, Kidney Troubles, Scrofula, Catarrh, old Ulcers and Skin Diseases, try one bottle of B. B. B. For sale in Newberne by R. N. DUFFY.
