Editor of Journal, New Berne:
State in your paper that I shall be in Newberne tomorrow to accept service of all restraining orders obtained against me by my friends, the county commissioners. The State will control the next annual meeting of the A. & N.
G. R. R. Co., not with standing all ininvestions to break down the strength of junctions to break down the strength of the supporters of Gov. Scales. WASHINGTON BRYAN.

The Fun Begun. Rumors were flying around yesterday morning that railroad matters were beginning to boil, even before the stockholders could enjoy the fun at the annual meeting.

A JOURNAL reporter called on several attorneys to find out what was up, but he could learn nothing definite. The story goes that when the West bound mail and passenger train, on which was Judge Gudger on his way from Carteret court, arrived at Newport yesterday morning, Hon. C. C. Clark, W. G. Brinson, Esq., and, perhaps, two or three other gentlemen, stepped aboard, having gone down on the freight train, bearing a petition from the county commissioners of Craven county praying an injunction against Washington Bryan and others as stockholders of the A. & N. C. Railroad to prevent their voting certain stock held by them in the coming stockholders' meeting, and also to enjoin the stockholders taking any action until the question of voting "split stock" shall have been decided by the courts. The petition was granted and the cause set for hearing before Judge Phillips at Tarboro on Tuesday next.

What effect this move will have on the Governor, or the stockholders when they meet next Thursday, it is now difficult to tell. It may result in staving off the annual meeting and continuing the present board of directors, unless the Governor sees fit to exercise the power once used by Governor Caldwell and turn them out. Be this as it may, it certainly looks as if there were lively times ahead.

forth American Review. Few things are more fascinating in their way than a study of the subterranean history of man, whether in caves or in mounds, whether it be to corroboin the mity on a vient to Mrs. Claypoole. rate written history, or to take testident Bartlett, of Dartmouth, contributes an interesting article on this topic to the July number of the North American Review. From the men of unknown ages and their works underground, to men grappling with the latest questions of our own day and discussing the par-ceiling out of the earth's surface, is a long step; but in the same number of the Review appears a conversation be-tween David Dudley Field and Henry George, on land and taxation. Another The finishing work on the inside of a very serious issue, the extradition of dynamite criminals, is debated by Presi-dent Angell, of Michigan University, George Tickner, Curtis, and Justice T. M. Cooley, Dorman B. Eaton, chief of the Civil Service Commission, gives his views of the results of that reform. William Clarke shows the futile character of any scheme for British imperial federation, and Thomas W. Knox gives a brief but interesting sketch of the progress of European influence in Asia. The other articles are one by Gail Hamilton on Prohibition in practice, and one by Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst on the decline of Christianity. These, with the batch of free-hand comments, make up a number of unusual interest. If the alloted age of man were sufficient for a magazine, we might have to part here with an old friend; for the Review has just completed, its has just completed its seventieth year. But outwardly it renows its youth with a new cover, and inwardly it seems more vigorous than ever.

BANSOM AT TRINITY.

AN INTERVAL OF THIRTSEN FEARS.

A Reminiscence. Senator Ransom was the orator at Trinity College Commencement again in 1885, as he was in 1872. The reporters say he came hurriedly from pressing public duties at Washington, and he spoke without preparation, declaring that the pressure upon him had allowed him no time for writing an address.

Yet he did not disappoint the expectation of his auditors.

In 1872 Senator Ransom was to deliver the address at Trinity Commencement The session of Congress had been prolonged, Commencement day was near at hand, and Congress gave no signs of adjourning. Senator Ransom tele-graphed Governor Vance, then a prac-ticing lawyer at Charlotte, briefly re-questing that he go to Trinity and make the address for him. Governor Vance handed the dispatch to the writer, with the remark, "Here is a pretty cool proposition; don't you think so?" The reply was, "Governor, if you knew reply was, "Governor, if you knew what I think I know, you would comply with the request," Vance made some preparation and did go to Trinity. Congress adjourned in time for Ransom to barely reach Trinity for the Commencement. The Democratic Legislature of 1870 had elected Governor Vance to the United States Senate, defeating Gen. Matt. Ransom for the caucus nomina-tion." Governor Vance was "banned," but his friends, led by Col. Ham. Jones, of Charlotte, believed that he would be admitted to the Senate, by a prompt removal of his disabilities, on his election by the General Assembly of North Carolina.

Senator Abbott's term expired March 4, 1871, but the Senate refused to admit Governor Vance as his successor. Finally, after persistently refusing the removal of his disabilities, Governor Vance, in February, 1872, returned his credentials to the Legislature.

For the caucus nomination to fill the vacancy, Judge Merrimon contested with Gen. Ransom. The issue again seemed doubtful for the latter. Sitting with him in a room at the Yarborough House, receiving the ballots as they were taken in caucus, the writer remarked to Gen. Ransom, that, in the event of his election, or no matter who was chosen, the people of the State would expect nothing short of the re-moval of Vance's disabilities, and the tender to him of the Senatorial salary and allowance for the time during which Governor Vance had been North Carolina's Senator elect. Expressing the strongest confidence in his nomination that night, he replied: "My friends and I have done what we could to secure Governor Vance's admission to the Senate; I have said to no one what I would do if elected to the Senate in his place; but you know I will do what I ought to The conversation was interrupted by the entrance of a messenger inform-ing Gen. Ransom of his nomination, which was equivalent to election. Senator Ransom was admitted to the seat from which Senator Vance had been excluded, and the writer had frequent communications with him and friends near to him. It was perfectly spared to have Governor Vance relieved, and there never existed a doubt among those friends that Senator Ranson would succeed before the close of the long session of Congress.

Ransom, Vance and Merrimon, were at the Trinity commencement in 1872; the latter being the Democratic nomi-nee for Governor. Ransom had secured the removal of Vance's disabilities in the very last hours of the session, with a number of other distinguished North Carol nians, Lt.-Goy. Armfield among the number, and at Trinity Ranson tendered to Vance the Senatorial salar and allowance for the year during which Vance had been the Senator elect. He declined to take it. It was urged upon him that it was justly his due, that he had held the credentials of the State, and the sum would not more than compensate him for the expense and loss of time incidental to his visits to and absences at Washington. The matter was referred to Judge Merrimon and other gentlemen, who saw no im-propriety in, but highly commended and approved the action of Senator

Governor Vance finally consented to Ransom.

Governor Vance finally consented to accept and did receive a portion of the year's salary. It was a very graceful act on the part of Senator Ransom, as creditable to himself as anything he has ever done; while the striot regard for matters of public propriety, which Governor Vance evinced on this occasion is the strongest characteristic of his eventful and very distinguished public life.

Judge Merrimon followed Gen. Ransom into the Senate, by an election through a schism is the Democratic party in the fall of 1872, having detested Governor Vance in open convention of the two houses of the General Assembly. Vance was elected Governor in 1876, the position for which Merrimon was defeated before the people in 1872. In 1879, Vance was elected to the Senate and Merrimon. Ransom and Vanca have been repeatedly elected to the Senate; and Merrimon. Ransom and Council of State, was last year elected by the Democracy to a permanent seat on the Supreme Court Bench of the State.

And it is the somewhat curious his-

And it is the somewhat curious his-tory of the writer to have been an active supporter of all the trio in their final attainment of Senatorial honors. First Ransom against Vance; second Bansom against Merrimon; third Merrimon against Vance, and in the fourth contest Vance against Merrimon-

PROBIBITION IN GEORGIA.

More than Half the Counties in the State Prohibiting the Sale

ATLANTA, June 12 .- The Georgia Temperance Convention concluded its session yesterday. Reports were made frem all parts of the State, indicating a rapid growth of the sentiment in favor of prohibition and a rising enthusiasm of the masses for temperance. Resolu-tions were adopted petitioning the Legisat its session next month, so that in every county in the State there can be an election on prohibition. Of the 138 counties in Georgia, twenty have restricted the sale of liquor and eighty have absolutely prohibited it. It is thought that more than half of the thirty-eight counties where the sale of liquor is now unrestricted will be car-ried for prohibition if the Legislature passes the law asked for. The resolutions declare that temperance must not be mixed with politics, and in the elec-tion for members for the State at large of the Executive Committee two Democrats and two Republicans were chosen There were several negro delegates in the Convention, and resolutions were ed to thoroughly organize the temperance movement among the negroes throughout the State. The Convention was the largest and most representative body of the kind ever held in Georgia It adjourned late yesterday afternoon and in the evening the members attended in a body at the Tabernacle where great revival meetings are being conducted. Dr. L.W. Munhall preached on temperance to 5,000 persons.

Scrofula.

I have had hereditary scrofula broken out on me for eight years. My mother and one sister died with it, and I, supposing that I would go as other mem-bers of the family had, had despaired of life. The treatment of mercury and potash seemed to aggravate instead of curing the disease. In this condition I was pressed to use Swift's Specific. After taking six bottles the fearful ulcers on my neck and arms disappeared and the scars only remain to remind me of my sufferings. Had I taken S. S.
