AN ATROCTOUS MURDER. Man Descris His Wife, Marries a Paramour and Then Takes Her Life, and Escapes the Clutenes of the Law By a Desperate Dash for Precion.

Wm. Petteway, a colored man, who formerly was employed by Mr. Abram Lee, at Adams creek, some time ago deserted his wife, who he left at North river, Carteret county, when he came to this. After working some time in the employ of Mr. Lee he consorted with a disreputable woman in the neighborhood by the name of Betsey Branch which so aroused the anger of his wife that she instituted proceedings against Petteway to compel him to contribute to tier support. This so far from reforming him only made the matter worse, and he and Betsy made a trip to this city, obtained license and were united in the bonds of wedlock by Justice Brinson. After this Petteway left the employ of Mr. Lee and became a tenant with others on the Garbacon farm a City, has sent in a ripe watermelon to employment. Here, the neighbors say, Betsey and William did not live peaceably together; in fact they quarrelled and sometimes fought, and matters became so unpleasant with them that they determined to separate, and William was to procure her a passage to New Berne that she might at least be out of his sight, if not out of his thoughts, she bid adieu to the home that had proved so unsatisfactory to her, and with William started on foot to Adams creek to seek a passage to the city as arranged. The distance was not great, probably one and a half or two miles, and William returned home during the day and stated that the woman had gone to town with one Fisher, who runs a boat occasionally to the city. Some children say that William took off his clothes, or a portion of them, and washed some blood off and hung them out to dry. The older persons become aware of the fact that Fisher had not gone to the city, and on so telling Wil- upon him. liam, he said that Betsey went up with a fisherman, and here but each person hearing them thought it was children at the other house, as during this week and also on Sabbath, there are children at both. It was Prayer meeting is also held in this further learned that William was seen church at 9 o'clock each morning. These going in that direction, after his return are pleasant services, and many of our the first time, with a shovel and also clay upon it, as if recently used.

William was placed under guard of four men, who watched by turns, dividing the night into two watches, while he had his arms pinioned securely and his hands tied behind his body. As the night wore on he asked one of the guards to let him have water to drink, which was furnished, and he then asked that he might go to the door to spit, which was also granted, and it is supposed that he had managed to loose his hands by some means, for when he reached the door, which he did just as The register of deeds requests us to his guard was replacing the dipper from merchants that they are re which he had drank, William did not stop to spit, but split like a frightened

Pardon Revelled.

Rufus Mullis, a young white man sentenced for manulaughter, from Mecklenburg county, was pardoned Thursday by Gov. Scales. Yesterday, when his pardon was sent to the penitentiary, it was ascertained by the Governor that Mullis had escaped, from the Powell farm, two weeks ago. It was an awkward situation. The pardon was promptly revoked.—News and Observer.

Can the Governor revoke a pardon once it is issued and made a record? If a pardon can be revoked one hour after its issue, why not a year or ten years afterward? If, as in this case, the pardon was granted under circumstances to make it improper that a pardon should issue, could the Governor revoke it any more than he could revoke one improperly granted on such discovery after the lapse of months? Was not Mullis free in contemplation of law, when the pardon was issued and recorded? Has the delivery of the pardon to the convict, and opening of his cell door anything to do with the fact of pardon? Is not arrest and punishment for escaping the legal and proper course?

The grief-stricken parents have the symposthies of the ontire community.

Robert Ward, col., of Trenton township, had 3 hams, at Trenton on Satura day last which weighed a little over a hundred pounds, and they were nice, plump, and well curred. They were quickly taken by Messre. Smith & Wilson, Ward said that he had more at home which he would dispose of provided he could get his price.

All the great and the small towns in the State have their baseball clubs. Why is it that Trenton is so far behind? The skating fever, I believe, has about all subsided. Now for a baseball club, Diad, in Beaver creak township, on the 22nd of June, of cholera infantum, William, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pollock, aged about 19 months. Our young men say that they can't get married, for their money is all invested in their crops and they can't command enough floating cash to purchase their marriage licenses. What a pity that the last Legislature did not take heed to the Wilson Mirror and abolish the marriage license tax so all could marry whether they had money or not. But some of them say that when cotton opens so they can raise the cash, they intend to after their bachelor mede of living, as they never intend to raise another crop without a helpmeet at home.

Professor E. M. Goodwin, who was recently re-elected Superintendent of our Graded School, resigned, and has been elected Superintendent of our Graded School. We congratulate Greensboro on securing the services of one so well qualified to discharge the important duties devolving upon him.

We are pleased to see in our midst Mr. M. E. Hill, of Macon, Ga. He left this county in 1852, and was here on a visit about thirteeen years ago. He has many relatives and warm friends in the county who are glad to see him, and they hope to have him return and spend his latter days among them. He speaks with pleasure of the many marked improvements in his native town and county. He reports crops as being very good in his neighborhood near Macon.

Mr. J. G. Price, living near Stoning to the flow and wait for the fields to dry before we can plought. If we have x few more rainy days like Friday and Saturday last, our crops will be badly cut off. The grass is again taking possession. Work will be plently as soon as the waters dry up. Can't we induce the huckleberry brigade to suspend a few days to help us out of the grass? What a fine thing it is for crops that the huckleberries and dawberries don't get ready to gather all at the same time! Farmers had better hurry up before the dewberry brigade organizes; if they don't, livey can't hire them, for they had rather plok them at 3 cts, per quart and make 10 cts, a day, than chop in the farm for fair wages.
