We learn that Mr. Timothy Hoyt will lecture in Ebenezer Presbyterian Church on tomorrow, 19th inst., at 3 o'clock p. m. Subject: The colored people of South America. Mr. Hoyt is the Colporteur of the Presbyterian Church for this State, and will, no doubt, prove interesting to all who go to hear him, as he has traveled very extensively in South America. All are invited.

A JOURNAL reporter dropping into H. B. Duffy's yesterday found him busy filling an order from Bath, Beaufort county, which began thusly: "I read your advertisement in the Journal," etc. We have many merchants in New Berne who carry no advertisement in the above incident that they may know that advertisements are read, and that they invite trade from a distance. We send out a number of Weeklies this week to the merchants of this city that they may see what sort of a paper we send to the country.

Ineligible.

The position to which Capt. H. W. Wahab has been appointed superintendent of Life Saving Service, is also an office of pustoms which no owner of vessels can hold. Capt. Wahab being an owner of vessels is therefore ineligible, at least he had rather decline the office than part with the ownership of vessels. Our Elizabeth City friends will now have another whack at this position. Capt. Wahab would have made a very efficient officer and we regret that he is not eligible under existing laws.

Baueball.

An interesting game of baseball was played Thursday evening between the Clairmont and New Berne Clubs. The Clairmont having won a game on the 4th of July, considerable interest was manifested in the result. The features of the game were heavy batting, and considering the ground the field was well played. The following is the score by innings:

How They Treat Strangers in Trenton. The following communication will xplain itself:

TO THE READERS OF THE JOURNAL:-Yes they have got me shure enough and they think so much of me that they have put me in a nice prittie little brick house and they have even got iron shutters to the Doors and Windows so that no one can get to me by Day or any thing can hurt me by night.

Yes they cirtenly think a heap of me for they will charge a man two hundred Dollars for me to walk a cross the street to take Drink of beer with him.

But they need not be uneasy about me for I'm not worth as much as they may think I am. They Do think a heap of a fellow though to keep him up here and board him for nothing as they are Doing me For I think the State will have to pay for it.

Board of Council and Policemen. EDITOR JOURNAL:-Some thoughts on the rules governing the policemen: Not allowed to use profane language. Why should a servant be better than his lord? Cannot drink or onter drinkhis lord? Cannot drink or enter drinking saloons. Why take away their rights? Do they not need the liquor to keep them cool in summer and warm in winter? Keep their shoes clean, etc. Extreme foolishness. Dismissed for intoxication. Why should they not be allowed this luxury that others enjoy? Cannot sit on goods boxes, stop at the corners of streets, stand in doorways, etc. This looks like the wisdom of Solomon. Are not the councilmen taking an advantage of the policemen? Suppose that some of the council were put on the police force, would they not consider these rules hard? Could they keep from drinking, swearing, stopping at street corners, boots biacked in dry and wet weather? Would they not swear and drink the harder?

Moncurs, July 9.

The investigating committee, which is seeking to unravel the mystery of the triple fourder here, is proceeding slowly, but perhaps none the less surely. Two negroes are in juil, as has been stated. Another suspected man has been arcested. He is charged with the Gunter murder, 18 months ago. The committee think they will unearth both murders at once.

A CONFEDERATE HEROINE.

ow one of Newbern's Baughters Gave Valuable Information to the Southern Troops.

[The Times-Democrat.] The great events of the "war between the States" have had many chroniclers and it is certain they will not lack many more. The stories of First and Second Manassas, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, the Seven Days Around Richmond, Sharps-burg or Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancelloraville, Vicksburg, Gettys-burg, Lookout Mountain, Chicksmauga, Prachtree Creek, Franklin, the Mine at Peachtree Creek, Franklin, the Mine at Petersburg, Spotsylvania Courthouse, Cold Harbor, and scores of other im-portant battles till the final surrender of the great armies of the Confederacy, will be told and retold until the nam of the chief leaders will become house-hold words, North and South, and their fame will go down to posterity on the illuminated pages of history. A Stephens and a Davis and other skilled and polished writers having taken, and will continue to take, care that the causes which produced the strife are properly set in order and discussed, it should be the task of others to tell the tale of the heroism, privations, suffer-ings, and patriotism of those who bore an humbler but not less meritorious position in the mighty struggle which for four years shook this great country to its centre, and whose results, for good or evil, generations yet unborn will feel. It is the duty of every one to record such events and incidents as came under his personal notice during the war, and which illustrate the character of the private soldier who fought the great battles, who fell on picket or in the numerous small skirmishes and fights, which the historians of the war ignore entirely, or which they dismiss with one stroke of the pen. Nor are the heroism and patriotism of the women less worthy of note and honorable mention. In both sections they stood by their colors, and, true, confident, and braye, never faltered or weakened, even when the sterner sex showed signs of great demoralization.

During the war it was the privilege and honor of the writer to command successively a company, a battalion of six companies, and a regiment, and there came under his observation certain incidents and heroic acts which will never embellish the pages of the histories above mentioned, but which should be noted in the familiar annals of a brave people. They have one merit, which many writers of so-called histories think of little worth; they are absolutely true, and happened as they are recorded. The following incident was first related by the writer in a memorial address delivered in Newbern, N. C., many years ago. The name of the lady has never been divulged for prudential considerations, but it has been placed from so heroic and daring a daughter

The South was full fof such heroines visiting firemen to the hall of the W. S. and it is due to them that their deeds be F. E. Company No. 1, which will be published. The writer trusts that the narration of this fact will cause hundaughters, and sweethearts vied with them in devotion to the cause, and their good works should be preserved and handed down to posterity.

In November, 1862, news was received at headquarters, Kinston, N. C., that two generals of the Federal army, one of them commanding in North Carolina, would on a certain day pass from Morehead City to Newbern. It was desirable, in view of certain contemplated movements to entire the templated movements, to capture the train and secure the officers. At 10 o'clock p. m. I received orders to proo'clock p. m. I received orders to pro-ceed at once to Trenton, take a detail from Major Nethercutt's command, and, if possible, capture the train. At 2 a. m. I reached Trenton, to find Major Nethercutt absent on one of his usual scouting expeditions. Awaiting his re-turn at daylight I made myself com-fortable, and was about to indulge in a morning's nap when the clatter of the feet of a horse at full gallop caused me to step to the door of the courthouse, of which I had taken possession for the night, to see what was in the wind. The sentinel upon duty had halted the rider was known to be a good Confederate and his statements were entirely to be relied upon. In a few moments thereafter I was in the private room of a citizen of Trenton, and his kind wife was warming an iron for my use. Applied to the seemingly blank sheet of paper, heat soon enabled me to see what I desired. General Foster had returned to Newbern two days sooner than anticipated, and was to leave that very morning with a force, most accurately detailed on the sheet before me, on an expedition having, in my opinion, the railroad bridge at Weldon for its objective point. The object of my expedition being thus frustrated, I returned immediately at full speed to Kinston and gave the information procurred through the intrepid daring of one of Newbern's daughters to the officer in command. Steps were promptly taken by the officer steps. The lady's name appended to that note has hever been told—her secret has been locked in my breast; my superior officer, respecting my motive in desiring to keep it, only required my pledge that the writer was worthy of credit. I am sure she never knew into whose hands her note fell, or the good it accomplished, till she heard me, several years thereafter, relate the incident. She was sitting in front of the I state that she was a young lady, ten-derly reared, and then in the very morn-ing of maidenhood, her ride at mid-night, at great personal risk, to convey such useful information, can be properly appreciated.
