New Berne as a Cotton Market.

Now that it is pretty well settled that good cotton crop is promised in this section it behooves the members of the Board of Trade and Cotton Exchange to make an effort to handle as much of the crop at New Berne as possible. They should do this by offering inducements to farmers to bring their cotton here. The inducements that the honest farmer wants are, good prices, fair weights and proper grading. In order to secure these the farmer must bring his cotton in good condition, and then our buyers must secure advantages in freights equal to any other market similarly situated. With the natural advantages possessed by New Berne, she ought to share. be able to compete with any market in the State for cotton, but if she fails to reap the advantages of her position, it will be because her business men are not alive to the interest of the community.

To build up New Berne as a cotton and grain market is not only to the interest of the citizens who do business here, but it is of vast interest to every farmer in this section. Hence, there should be a united effort on the part of both to secure all the advantages for sides were very considerable. Two hunfarmer in this section. Hence, there handling these products that are enjoyed by other towns and cities. There should be more confidence between the buyers and the farmers. The honest buyers will not form cliques to get the farmers' cotton for less than it is worth, and the honest farmers will not falsely pack their cotton in order to obtain more than its value. If we secure the advantages to which we are entitled in the matter of freights, we see no reason why New Berne shall not be one of the best markets for cotton in the

AN IMPORTANT INVENTION,

Which will Doubtless Prove of Great Value to the State.

The no fence law going into operation in so many of the most fertile counties of North Carolina will cause the demolition of thousands of miles of fence In place of the expensively fenced fields only the pastures and lots will be en-closed. For such purposes a cheap, simple and portable fence is of peculiar value. In the first place there are many persons who object to barbed wire fences, while recognizing their cheapness. These say that a fence part wire, part wood, is what is needed, as where used cattle are not liable to be injured. The ideal fence is now a reality, it appears, for the American fence company manufactures a fence which answers all these requirements. Introduced some years ago, it has rapidly found its way into popular favor, especially at the west, and the rights of sale in nearly all the States have been sold. As a reporter yesterday watched the manufacture of the fence he thought that all things are indeed susceptible of improvement and that the old way of making fences was obsolete. A machine stands in the old Pioneer warehouse. It is a marvel of simplicity. There are coils of galvanized wire, levers and an ingenious method of twisting the wires under and over slats of wood. It is like weaving, with iron as the web and wood the woof. Two men operate the machine, one moves the wheel, the other feeds the slats into its ready jaws. All the other motions are automatic and an error is impossible. The two men turn out easily 2,000 feet a day. The fence as dicator tells the quantity can learn in an hour to "weave" fenc-ing rapidly. The lightness and strength of the fence are wonderful. The wires grip the slats with such tightness that they cannot be removed. The distance of the slats apart is easily regulated, while the number of the wires can also be rapidly changed. There are various styles of fence, from the plain farm fence at 41 cents per foot, or the same, painted, 5 cents per foot, to the strong yet tasteful ornamental lawn and garien fence at 20 cents per foot. these fences are shown, and the machine is in constant operation. Letters from all points South endorse the fence, which is in use in all the other States. Mr. J. T. Henderson, commissioner of agriculture of Georgia, says it is pig proof and chicken proof, cheap, dura-ble and notable for extreme portability. The sales are very large. Mr. S. C. Pitney, the owner, or Mr. N. C. Carr, explain all the details. Mr. Pitney will sell the right for North Carolina. Any one who sees the fence and the machine will realize that there is a bonanza for the man who purchases the right.—News and Observer.

A Sad Accident.

Saturday, Joseph, son of Mr. James Brown of this county, was accidently shot and instantly killed. Young Mr. Brown and a friend of his had been hunting and as they passed some colored children one of them was in the act of taking an old gun from one of his companions. One of the hammers to the gun was in some way pulled back and it fell, firing the gun. The charge struck Mr. Brown on the right side of the throat, passing through the lower part of the head, coming out behind the left ear and shattering the back of the head. A Sad Accident.

Mr. Brown was a promising, popular youth about sixteen years of age. The deepest sympathy prevails throughout the community.—Tarboro Southerner.

If attempted, it would have been wrecked by an infuriated mob. A good deal of enlighten-ment on the subject of machinery and hand labor has taken place since then.

Crinoline seems to be exceedingly ancient. Hesiod, who wrote in the eighth century before Christ, must have observed something of the kind, for he advises young men not to be led astray by certain women of his day who wore their clothes puffed out behind. If the Greek women of Hesiod's day, it is not improbable that they were also worn 200 years earlier, and that Helen, when she fled with Paris to Troy, wore some primitive kind of crinoline.

A gentleman entered Sarony's the other day for the purpose of obtaining a cabinet picture of himself. The artist placed him in position and screwed up his machine to the proper focus. "Now, look pleasant and cheerful, please," he said. "and keep your eye fastened on that picture." Instead of looking cheerful, however, the gentleman leaned forward and assumed a look of infinite weariness. "Pardon me," exclaimed the photographer, "that will scarcely do; your expression is far too sombre to make an agreeable picture. You must try to coax up a slight smile." and how to capture it became a question eagerly debated. It happening that a company of soldiers was at target prac-tice on the sands, the officer in charge directed a number of his men to fire on the whale. This they did, striking it frequently, but seemingly with little effect, the animal meanwhile making desperate but fruitless efforts to regain deep water. When the tide had receded sufficiently, several soldiers waded waist high into the sea, and one of them drove his bayonet into the eye of the fish. Then there was a convulsive movement, followed by a violent flap of the tail, and all was over. A harpoon, to which was attached a strong rope about thirty feet long, was found stick-ing in the neck of the whale, in which there was a gash twenty inches long and very deep.
