WONDERFUL DISCOVERIES.

The Washington Gazette has discovered that the steamer "Eli" can't turn in Lake Landing canal, and that it is very slow and inconvenient to load her, and therefore the Margie has great advantages over her and the trade in the Lake Landing section can be turned to Washington. The Gazette has also discovered that Mr. Walter P. Burrus would have made more money by securing the Margie and running from Lake Landing to Washington, and that the route is much safer than to New Berne. Wonderful discoveries! We think Mr. Burrus knows what he is about; at any rate no one around New Berne thinks he needs a guardian.

A Lively Race.

A few days ago Sheriff Hahn received a capias from Wilson for the arrest of a negro named Nelson, who, it appears, stands indicted for several high crimes. The sheriff suspected a negro who had been in the city several weeks, and he came so far satisfied that he was the man that he made up his mind to arrest him. Going down Middle street yesterday morning, when near Lovick's store on the old market site, the sheriff saw Nelson and began conversation with him by asking when he arrived. As the conversation proceeded the sheriff drew nearer to Nelson, and just as he raised his hand to grab him Nelson dodged under the sheriff's arm and dashed off, turning the corner at Kilburn's store, jumping walls, passed through the back yard of the Gaston House, out by the Cotton Exchange, up Craven street to South Front, down South Front to East Front, when his pursuers lost sight of him. When he made his dash the sheriff made a dash too, and was gaining on him until he reached the walls; he went over the two first walls in hot pursuit, and when the negro was in the act of scaling the high fence in rear of the Gaston House the sheriff threatened to shoot him if he did not stop. But the negro stopped just long enough to look back and discover that the sheriff had no pistol, and then went over the high fence like a cat squirrel. This fence was too much for the sheriff, so he dashed through the Gaston House, but the negro having much the advantage in distance had passed down South Front before he could reach the corner. The sheriff thinks he was gaining rapidly on the negro, and but for the high fences would have caught him. He claims to be the swifter, but awards the premium to Nelson for being the best jumper of high fences. His deputies kept up the search through the day, but had not succeeded in making the arrest at the time we go to press.

Three Brothers Killed in 12 Hours.

MARTIN'S VALLEY, Pa., Aug. 18.—The violent deaths of John, Wyman and Jason Truby, three brothers, which occurred between 11 o'clock on Friday night and 11 o'clock on Saturday morning, has created a profound sensation in the village. The three men were sons of a widow living here.

John was thirty-four years of age and was a flagman on the East Branch railroad. On Friday night about 11 o'clock he was sent to change a switch on the road, and in running along the track he fell and struck on his head, breaking his neck and crushing his skull.

Jason Truby, aged thirty-six, worked in the slate quarries. On Saturday morning he was crossing a cavity which was filled with water from the recent rains. The board tipped, he struck his head against a stone and he was drowned. Wyman Truby, thirty-eight years old, was a miller, and was at work in the mill at 10:30 o'clock. The flooring of a grain bin gave way in the room above and he was buried beneath hundreds of bushels of wheat. When he was taken out he was dead. Messengers started from the quarry and the railroad to tell Wyman of his brothers' death. They met at the mill just as Wyman's body was being carried out. Mrs. Truby, the mother, is not expected to live. Nine years ago she had another son killed in New York.

OUTRAGES IN IRELAND.

Said to be the Result of a Plot to Force Carnation to Take Stern Measures.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Special dispatches received from Ireland during the past two days tend to contradict the rose-colored view of Lord Carnarvon's tour of the country which is furnished by the general press despatches. The latter convey the idea that the new Viceroy's trip is a highly successful and almost a triumphal progress; that he is greeted everywhere by multitudes of people who, if not very enthusiastic, are at least orderly and respectful, and that the solid citizens of each town present him with loyal addresses, to all of which he makes complimentary and conciliatory replies.

It is true that the Earl and Countess have thus far made their journey without molestation, despite the absence of a police escort such as Earl Spencer always had whenever he stirred abroad. It is also true that there has been a succession of more or less serious agrarian outrages coinciding almost exactly in time and place with the Viceroy's itinerary. The experts at Dublin Castle do not believe that these coincidences are accidental. They have a theory that the outrages are ordered by some central body, and timed so that they will be reported alongside of the accounts of Lord Carnarvon's progress. They are, the experts believe, planned by the irreconcilables of the National party for the purpose of destroying the Viceroy's growing popularity by compelling him to resort to stern measures of repression.

It is difficult to see what is to be gained, either now or hereafter, by such suicidal tactics; but the Castle officials explain them by saying that without agitation, fair or foul, the agrarian occupation of many an Irish demagogue would be gone. They say, also, that there are many Nationalists whose aim is precisely similar to that of the nihilists, namely, to destroy everything, and bring about a condition of anarchy, in which life will be unsafe and property valueless. This, they hope, will drive the landlords and their agents from Ireland, leaving their lands to be seized upon and parcelled out among those who remain upon the ground.

An Earthquake in the Blue Ridge—Grandfather Mountain Trembling on His Plank.

(Special Topic.)

We learn from a reliable source of a very remarkable occurrence which took place near Blowing Rock and on the Grandfather mountain on Thursday evening of last week. About sundown Mrs. Reid, who lives on Capt. Faucette's farm, about 24 miles from Blowing Rock, was sitting in the house and was surprised to hear a very loud clap of thunder, although the sky was perfectly clear, and immediately the house began to shake, dishes to rattle and a noise was heard as though a six-horse team was being driven rapidly through the house. It lasted but a few moments, but during the time of it there was a perceptible and violent rocking. Mrs. Reid says she was "shocked" and could scarcely stand. Mr. Jos. B. Clarke reports very much the same state of affairs at his house. It is reported also to have been heard and felt in Boone. A man named Pat. Coffey, who lives at the foot of the Grandfather, and several other people were on top of the Grandfather at the time, and they were much frightened. Coffey was sitting on the large hanging rock, on the Wauga side of the view, which has such precipitous sides, and which is so famous for the beauty of the view to be obtained from it. He says it shook and quivered and trembled so that he scrambled from it in such haste and in such a fright as to appear more dead than alive. He and his party at once descended the mountain in a state of great alarm.

Mr. Jos. B. Clarke, who has taken some pains to investigate the strange affair, says that, as far as he can discover, the shock or whatever it was came in a "wave" that was deflected near his house and went down John's river. Does any one else in any other section remember to have noticed a like phenomenon at that time?

By a decision of Attorney General Garland made some weeks since an Indian was decided not to be a citizen of the United States, and therefore ineligible for the office of postmaster. It seems Owen is a Cherokee, and it is claimed he is ineligible from this fact. The matter will be laid before President Cleveland for final action. No one appears to question Owen's fitness, the only point being his ineligibility under the decision of the Attorney-General.

Ohio has a remarkable decrease in the number of marriages in proportion to the population. During the year preceding the war there were over 29,000 out of a population of about 3,340,000. The war reduced this number to an average of about 19,500, and the return of peace ran up the number to 30,479. This large increase denoted that there were a good many faithful girls who waited for the men to whom they had pledged their troth. After that the average number of marriages was about 26,000 a year for a number of years; but following the panic of 1873 there was a drop to 23,489. The revival of business in 1882 was marked by another increase to 30,500, but the succeeding depression of 1884 again reduced the number to 23,720.
