THE CIVIL-SERVICE IMPOSITION. Proposed Change in its Membership

and Some of the Reasens Thereof. WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.-It is probable there will be an entire change in the Civil-Service Commission. The present members of this Board are not believed to be the kind of men calculated to enforce civil-service law. Mr. Eaton, the head of the commission, is a man of runs by Cartagena, rose rapidly until many hobbies and is not a practical the water was seven feet deep around business man. He is not a well educated man and could not pass one of the simplest of the Board examinations. To sea by the raging flood. Dr. Gregory is an amiable old school teacher who has been convicted of the most active partianship. The proof of his making speeches for Blaine in Illi-nois last fall and his charging up his campaign expenses to the Government should have been enough to have in-sured his prompt dismissal. Thoman is a man with no public experience and was unknown outside of a very small Ohio village until he was put upon this commission. His use of Indiana school bonds of uncertain value in buying a house here has seriously impaired his usefulness.

The Chief Clerk of the commission, Mr. Layman, is a man who has held a number of subordinate positions under the Government. He is very subservient, like men of his class, to every There has been such an utter absence of men of character or ability from this commission that it has never been able to command respect or confidence. None of the members are known even by public men. It is hoped that when commission is reorganized men will be placed on it who can change its pres-

It is proposed by the President in the first place to select men who have a thorough knowledge of the departments and therefore, of what is best needed to bring up the true standard of the pub-lic service. With the exception of Mr. Layman, none of the present men con-nected with the commission have any nected with the commission have any practical knowledge for the requirements of the pulic offices.
