Courage.
Who is afraid? Everybody! There is not a creature living who does not suffer from fear, reasonable or unreasonable; and upon the whole, there is not more fear in the world than there is need of. It is indispensable. We could no more do it without fear than a watch could do without its mainspring.

Some good and brave boys suffer from the fear of being afraid; others from the fear of being thought afraid. Having learned to admire the courage and courageous deeds of heroes, when they find themselves alarmed at anything, they say to themselves,—

"Am I really a coward, then? If I am afraid of a cow, a dog, a dark room, or a clap of thunder, what a sorry figure I should cut if I had to be a soldier!"

But let us reflect a moment. A boy—even a man—ought to be afraid of a big, strange dog coming toward him, with red mouth open, panting and glaring. Perhaps he ought not to run away, because that is a dangerous kind of strategy, but he ought to be so much afraid of the dog as to keep a sharp lookout until he discovers the intentions of the brute.

Courage does not consist in not being afraid, but in meeting danger with a brave heart. That person is brave who does a duty he mentally dreads, and many a gallant fellow has gone into peril trembling and pale with alarm. But he went!

When the late J. P. Kennedy, of Baltimore, formerly Secretary of the Navy, was fifteen years of age, the country then being deeply agitated by the prospect of war with England, he made up his mind that when war came, he would join the army. One thought held him back: He was awfully afraid of the dark, having been terrified by ghost stories in his childhood.

In order to cure himself of his fears, he used to go at night to an extensive forest near his father's house, and walk about until morning. This he did until he was as much at ease in the woods at two o'clock in the morning as he was in his father's garden after breakfast. Although at first he saw enemies and ghosts at every step, he persevered until even these startling experiences ceased to alarm him. When the war was declared in 1812 he went to the front, took part in the battle of Bladensburg, and ran away with the rest of his regiment!

But his running away was glorious, too! "We made a fine scamper of it," he says. "I lost my musket in the melee, while bearing off a comrade whose leg was broken by a bullet." Another proof that even heroes can run away sometimes. If heroes, why not boys? Every good soldier knows that there are times when discretion is the better part of valor.—Youth's Companion.

The ideal young people's magazine. It holds the first place among periodicals of its class.—BOSTON JOURNAL.

ST. NICHOLAS.

An illustrated monthly periodical for boys and girls, appearing on the 25th of each month. Edited by May Mapes Dodge. Price, 25 cents a number, or $3.00 a year, in advance. Booksellers, newsdealers, postmasters, and the publishers take subscriptions, which should begin with the November number, the first of the volume.

Sr. Nicholas aims both to satisfy and to develop the tastes of its constituency; and its record for the past twelve years, during which it has always stood, as it stands today, at the head of periodicals for boys and girls, is a sufficient warrant for its excellence during the coming season. The editors announce the following as among the Leading Features for 1885-'86.

A Serial Story by Frances Hodgson Burnett. The first long story she has written for children.

A Christmas Story by W. D. Howells. With humorous pictures by his little daughter.

"George Washington," by Horace E. Scudder. A novel and attractive Historical Serial.

"Short Stories for Girls," by Louisa M. Alcott. The first—"The Candy Country"—in November.

New "Bits of Talk for Young Folks," by "H. H." This series forms a graceful and fitting memorial of a child-loving and child-helping soul.

Papers on the Great English Schools, Rugby and others. Illustrations by Joseph Pennell.

A Sea-coast Serial Story, by J. T. Trowbridge, will be life-like, vigorous and useful.

"Jenny's Boarding House," a serial by James Otis. Dealing with new-boy life and enterprise.

Frank R. Stockton will contribute several of his humorous and fanciful stories.

"Drill," by John Preston True. A capital school story for boys.

The Boyhood of Shakespeare, by Rose Kingsley. With illustrations by Alfred Parsons.

Short Stories by scores of prominent writers, including Susan Coolidge, H. H. Boyesen, Nora Perry, T. A. Janvier, Washington Gladden, Rossiter Johnson, Joaquin Miller, Sophie May, Ezekiah Butterworth, W. O. Stoddard, Harriet Prescott Spofford, and many others.

Enterprising Sketches by Alice W. Rollins, Charles G. Leland, Henry Elkford, Lieutenant Schwalka, Edward Eggleston, and others.

Poems, shorter contributions, and departments will complete what the Rural New Yorker calls "the best magazine for children in the world."

Harper's Magazine, ILLUSTRATED.

The December Number will begin the twenty-second Volume of Harper's Magazine. Miss Woolson's novel, "East Angles" and Mr. Howell's "Indian Summer"—holding the foremost place in current serial fiction—will run through several numbers, and will be followed by serial stories from R. D. Blackmore and Mrs. D. M. Chalm. A new editorial department, devoted to topics suggested by the current literature of America and Europe, will be established by W. D. Howells, beginning with the January number. The great literary event of last year will be the publication of a series of papers—taking the shape of a story, and depicting characteristic features and American society—as seen at our leading pleasure resorts—written by Charles Lindley Carter, and illustrated by C. M. Bellhop. The Magazine will give special attention to American subjects treated by the best American writers, and illustrated by leading American artists.

THE CENTURY FOR 1885-'86.

The remarkable interest in the War Papers and in the many timely and instructive serial features published recently in THE CENTURY has given that magazine a regular circulation of more than 200,000 Copies Monthly. Among the features for the coming volume which begin with the November number are:

The War Papers By General Grant and Others. These will be continued (most of them illustrated) until the close of the war. They have been described by leading writers on both sides. General Grant's papers to give descriptions of the battles of Chancellorsville and the Wilderness. General Sherman will write of Antietam, General D. C. Buell of Shiloh, General Pope, Longstreet and others of the special full runs, the Naval combats, including the capture of the Kearsarge and the Alabama, by officers of both sides, will be described.

The "Recollections of a Private" and other war papers of an anecdotal or humorous character will be features of the year.

Serial Stories by W. D. Howells, Henry Howells, Charles Reade, and George V. Cable. Mr. Howells' serial will be lighter vein than "The Rise of Silas Lapham." Mrs. Cable's novel of "The Aged and the Young," will be fully sustained.

The Illustrations will be kept up to the standard which has made THE CENTURY engravings famous the world over.

Prices: A Special Offer. Regular subscription price, $3.00 a year. To enable new readers to get up the War Papers with contributions from the same sources, we have arranged, for the first time, to publish the 13 back numbers, November 1884 to October 1885, with a year's subscription, at a special price of $1.00. A year's subscription, with the 13 back numbers, will be sent only upon receipt of these prices with remittances.

A free specimen copy of each number will be sent on request to all new subscribers. All orders and remittances should be sent to THE CENTURY, New York.
