The importance of this route to these remarkable stones (so-called). On their virtue. I have seen several of examining them I find most of them to be improved specimens of kaolin. Your travelling man, D. R. Walker, has on his farm in Lenoir county, tons of this mad stone, some of which I have per-sonally tested for all stings and snake bites, with satisfactory results. Its virtue lies in its great absorbing qualities. The stone is first submerged in water or heated over every particle of moisture at the point of application, and with the moisture goes the fluid poison into the stone. The heating of the stone before application expands and expels the air frem the inorepaces of the stone and thus greatly increases its absorbing powers. Of course after the poison has once been

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.-The Hon Wil-Washington, Jan. 13.—The Hon William Maxwell Evarts is the only member of the Senate who has heard all the speeches that have been delivered in that body on the silver question. When a Senator takes the floor to deliver an address on this subject, Mr. Evarts always takes the seat of some other Senator as near to the speaker as he can get, and listens with the most absorbing attention from the first word to the last.

The nages bring in the cards of wishers. The pages bring in the cards of visitors to him, but he invariably sends out word that he is engaged, and when a Senator comes over to whisper in his ear he motions him away. Not even will an invitation to luncheon tempt the junior Senator from New York from his post, but he stays by with a persistence that amazes the other Senators and gratifles whoever is on the floor. It is understood that Mr. Evarts is give silver coinage. Mr. Brown called up Beck's silver resolution and addressed the Senate on it, taking the ground that it would be unwise and unjust to the people to suspend the coinage of silver, and as to the bondholder, the medium it which they were to be paid had not been left in doubt but had been nominated in the bond. He contended that the officers of the Treasury should treat all public creditors alike; if they paid bondholders in gold alone, they should pay the laborer in gold.

Mr. Maxey followed Mr. Brown on the same line. The Judicial Salary bill wus taken up ending the discussion of which by

Mr. Morgan, the Senate adjourned. House.-On behalf of the committee on Presidential Laws Mr. Caldwell, of Tennessee, called up the Hoar Presidential Succession bill, and as there were but a few minutes of the morning nour remaining, by unanimous consen it was agreed that the debate should continue during the afternoon, Mr. Caldwell reserving the right to call the previous question at any time.

Mr. Caldwell stated that the committee in reporting this measure had not dealt with indifference or disrespect with the other propositions before it. There were many measures proposed that would more properly meet all pos sible or imaginary exigencies than the one now reported, but they all required constitutional amendment before they could become laws; and a constitutiona amendment involved delay which would ill accord with the reasonable anxiety which the great body of the people felt. There were many exigencies which the pending measure did not cover, but the present exigency it completely covered. It was a temporary bridge thrown across the chasm in order to meet the public demand, and would be followed in due time by an all-en-during structure over which a long line of Demogratic Presidents might march in unbroken succession.
