Dwelling Burned.
The sad news of the burning of Rev.
F. S. Becton's dwelling, kitchen and other outhouses, which occurred on Thursday morning, reached the city yesterday. Mr. Becton lives on Clubfoot creek, in the lower part of Craven county, is a member of the N. C. Conference, and has charge of Neuse Mission.

The fire broke out in the roof of the kitchen, catching from a stove pipe, while the family were at breakfast.
The kitchen was a few feet from the dining room and dwelling, but the wind was right to carry the flames directly to them. The buildings were so rapidly consumed by the devouring flames that only a little bedding was saved; nearly all the furniture, clothes and kitchen utensils were burned. Mrs. Becton and a young lady, Miss Taylor, who was living with her, saved only one dress each. The loss is about two thousand dollars, and is a severe one to Mr. Becton, as there was no insurance.

Annual Convention.
The State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association meets at Chapel Hill on the 11th inst. The chairman of the State executive committee in his notice of the Convention, makes the following appeal:

The Young Men's Christian Association work in our State, falling so far short of the progress manifested in most of our sister States, especially throughout the North, is no doubt, mainly attributable to lack of an intelligent understanding of association work. Absence of united effort in State work has also been a hindrance to our success. If those whose "heart is in the work" will but appreciate these facts, and act, the good accomplished for the young men of our commonwealth will be incalculable. It is therefore earnestly desired that every association in the State be fully represented at the coming convention, so that we may all enter upon the new year with increased enthusiasm and a better knowledge of our work. The number of delegates is unlimited, and each association should promptly arrange to send to the convention as large a delegation as possible.

rapid rise in circulation is without a peer in the history of calculated to further increase its southern readers, of which it has been securing a good many.

Burned to Death.

minutes she died.

80 Day Seed Corn.

Dear Editor:—I have a limited amount of a very superior quality of extremely large field corn which has recently been originated and which will mature in from 80 to 90 days. Ears are from 10 to 14 inches long, and has a slender cob and very fine large grains; is a marvel of beauty; 124 bushels of shelled corn has been raised per acre. I am very anxious to know what this corn will do in other climates, before advertising it for sale and will send a large sample package free to any farmer who will take good care and report his success with it and will enclose 50 cents in silver to pay postage, packing, etc., on same. Address, W. F. HERR, Springfield, Ohio.

Congressional Work.

SENATE—March 3.—The Chair laid before the Senate the President's message on the treatment of Chinese in the west, already published. Reference to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. Riddleberger offered a resolution, which was agreed to, requiring each Senator to report to the Senate the name of his private secretary. In introducing the resolution Mr. Riddleberger said that some men were holding tickets of admission to the Senate floor who would not be admitted to the parlors of gentlemen if they were known as Riddleberger knew them. Such tickets were so issued to people who received no pay except admission to the Senate floor to blackmail gentlemen, to libel them in their newspapers. Mr. Riddleberger said he knew of a case in point. "We know what had been said in the House about Mr. Eads being on the floor of this House." He asked if it were permissible for him (Riddleberger) to state that while Eads had not been on the floor of the Senate, he had had three hundred men there—two representing Republican newspapers and one a Democratic newspaper—who came to secure information on which to libel Senators.
Imagine a man having a ticket to the Senate floor in the pretended capacity of private secretary to a Senator—what Senator had his own son as his private secretary—who drew the pay, while the other—the creature—was compensated by a ticket.

After the adoption of the resolution, Mr. Hear had it reconsidered and so amended as to have the names sent in to the Secretary of the Senate.

The Education bill was then taken up and Mr. Harrison spoke in advocacy of the bill and in opposition to Mr. Allison's amendment.

Mr. Edmunds moved a substitute for Mr. Allison's amendment as follows:
"And in each State and territory in which there shall be separate schools for white and colored children, the money paid in such State or territory shall be apportioned and paid out for the support of such white and colored schools, respectively, in the proportion that white and colored children between the ages of ten and twenty-one years in such State or territory bear to each other, as shown by the census of 1880.
The foregoing provision shall not affect the application of the proper proportion of said money to the support of all common schools wherein no distinction of race or color shall exist."

After a long debate Mr. Blair expressed his willingness to accept Mr.
Edmunds substitute and it was adopted.

The amendment offered by Mr. Dolph was rejected by a viva voce vote, and Mr. Plumb began a speech. While the Senator was speaking, Mr. Riddleberger rose to a point of order, saying he had called for a division on the vote and called for it in a tone that the President of the Senate could not fail to hear. Mr.
Riddleberger was ruled out of order, and yielded under protest.

After Mr. Plumb had resumed his remarks, Senator Riddleberger again rose and renewed his point of order. "The President of the Senate was not observing the rule," he said. The Senator from Kansas (Plumb) was trying to defeat the bill and was allowed to make another speech when a division had been called for. The responsibility was between the Senator from Kansas and the President of the Senate. He (Riddleberger) had heard it said that whatever he said in the Senate was generally "sent upon." He did not care for that, however, since he knew he was right.
"I am struggling for the passage of this bill," he said, "and am going to continue the struggle under the rules of the Senate, and you can't take from that desk the book that ought to control you and within it a rule that justifies your ruling while ago."

The President pro tempore began to reply, but was interrupted by Mr. Riddleberger. The Chair again said the Senator from Virginia will please not interrupt the Chair. The Senator did not call for a division or for the yeas and nays, but when the Senator from Kansas (Plumb) was advancing an argument on the bill, the Senator from Virginia (Riddleberger) then rose and demanded a division. It was then too late. The Chair says kindly, but firmly, to the Senator from Virginia that he has not sought to discriminate against him in the slightest degree. He is mistaken in that. On the contrary, the Chair has often done the reverse and appeals to the Senator from Virginia to withdraw that imputation, that the Chair had ever discriminated against him or sought to deprive him of his rights. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. Riddleberger—If the Chair will permit me, I do not mean to say that the Chair had discriminated against me.
I mean to say that the Chair itself did not comprehend the rules. [Roars of laughter.] That is exactly what I meant to say.

After further remarks the yeas and nays were ordered on the Dolph amendment, on which a viva voce vote had been taken, and pending a call the Senate went into executive session. When the doors were reopened the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The Speaker laid before the House the message of the President on Chinese troubles, which was read by the clerk, and referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

The House consumed the morning hour in committee of the whole in consideration of the bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to carry out tests of iron, steel and other structural materials. Pending action, the committee rose and then the House again went into committee on the Pension Appropriations bill.

expressing his admiration for the manner in which he had defamed the old story as well known in that country as "the boy stood on the burning deck," or "Mary had a little lamb." [Laughter.]

Mr. Breckenridge, of Ky., guided the discussion away from the channels of politics into which it had flown and brought it back to the consideration of the general question of the pensions system. He expressed himself in favor of liberal pensions and thought that it should always be the policy of the Republic to pay generous pensions; but there must be some economies and seasonably consideration both as to persons and the amount. It was not a matter of sentiment which must decide the rate, but a matter of wise calculation. He closed his speech with an eloquent peroration descriptive of the beautiful cemetery at Lexington, which contained grave of fathers and sons and brothers who had fallen in opposing ranks in the terrific struggle of war and of the peaceful lives of the descendants of those men who though they had been divided in sense of duty, had never been divided in their love. "As an American representative," he said, "treating of American questions, loving American people, denying that this is a paternal government, denying that taxes should be wrung from the people except from necessity, I shall vote my own convictions, treating with contempt any effort to intimidate or any purpose to misconstrue." [Loud applause on the Democratic side.] Pending further action the committee rose.

Mr. Bragg, of Wis., reported the Army Appropriation bill from the Military committee, and it was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Adjourned.
