We publish today from the News and Observer a tribute to the late Mrs. Mary Bayard Clarke. Mrs. Clarke had attained literary fame before the editor of this paper had attained his majority.
We take pleasure in copying from those who were more familiar with her history. She was worthy of all that has been written, and more.

In another column we give the proceedings of the Fayetteville bar in regard to the death of Philemon Holland, jr. It is gratifying to his many friends and relatives here to know that he had won so many warm friends in his adopted town. In a notice of Sunday services the Gazette says in the evening, probably at the same hour the funeral was being conducted here, the Rev. Mr. Gibbs was called on in the M. E. Sunday-school and paid a fitting tribute to the life and character of the deceased.

Sentenced to be Hanged.

At the Oaslow term of the Superior court last week, Geo. McNair, a colored boy of about 16 years, was sentenced by His Honor, Judge Gilmer, to be hanged on the first Friday in May. George was convicted at the Spring term of the court, 1885, but an appeal was taken upon the ground that the Judge in his charge to the jury told them that in considering the testimony in regard to the age of the prisoner, which was conflicting, some witnesses swearing that he was under fourteen years, others that he was more than fourteen, they had a right to take into consideration his physique, and that they could see that he was then a full grown man. Prisoner's counsel excepted to this last remark as an expression of opinion of the court prejudicial to the prisoner. The Supreme Court overruled the exception.
It is understood that the jury that tried him and many leading citizens of the county will sign a petition to the Government asking that the sentence be commuted.

The Death of Mrs. Mary Bayard Clarke.
In the death of this lady, which occurred at her home at New Berne yesterday morning, North Carolina lost one of its most gifted daughters, whose facile pen wrought melodious verse, and whose writing attracted deserved attention and admiration. She was a devoted daughter of the State and did more than any other of its women to collect and preserve the literary work of the others of her sex who were her natives. She was the fourth daughter of the late Thomas Pollock Devereux, of Raleigh, and was born here, in May, 1828. On her mother's side she was a relative of the Bayard family, so prominent in American history. She received a thorough education and at an early age exhibited literary abilities of a high order.
She married Col. Wm. J. Clarke, of this city, who preceded her to the grave but two months. She resided in Texas and New Orleans for some years, and about 1861 returned to this State. About 1853 she published her first work, "Mosses from a Rolling Stone." It contains a number of poems, many graceful in finish, and attracted the attention of the literary public. Her next work, "Wood Notes, or Carolina Carols," was a collection of poems written by various women of the State at various times. In this she rescued from oblivion many poems of true merit. Her work in this regard was in truth a labor of love, and in doing it she gave added proof of her desire to do whatever she could to reflect honor upon her State. She devoted the following years to literary work, more as a recreation than otherwise. One poem, written in memory of Annie Custis Lee, daughter of the illustrious Robert E.
Lee, who died and was buried in Warren county, was considered by critics worthy of high praise. After the war Mrs. Clarke was a regular contributor to a magazine published at Raleigh.
Later she was on the staff of a magazine published at Richmond, Va. She wrote a biography of Mr. George E. Badger and also a sketch of the life, character and public services of Governor Z. B.
Vance. About 1870 she published her most ambitious work, a poem "Clytie and Zenobia, or the Lily and the Palm." About 1874 she went to Chicago and was for some time occupied in literary work on a magazine established there by several women of prominence. She wrote an opera, "Pocahontas," which it was her intention to put upon the stage, but this plan was never carried out. She continued to write until but a little while before her death, short poems, book reviews and lighter productions for the magazines or newspapers being her main work in these later days. A sketch of her appeared in a work on Southern female writers, and was prepared in 1869 by Hon. E. G. Reade. Mrs.
Clarke enjoyed the very unusual honor of having one of her poems spread upon the records of the supreme court of North Carolina. In July, 1868, the venerable and beloved clerk of that court, Edmund Freeman, died at the very stroke of noon, just at the day, the hour and the moment when the terms of the justices of the court expired. Mrs.
Clarke wrote a poem upon this occurrence. It was read before the court by Hon. D. G. Fowle, and upon his motion the justices ordered it spread upon and made a part of the minutes of the court.

Mrs. Clarke's health had for some years been slowly failing. A month ago a stroke of paralysis came and from it she never rallied. Death was daily expected and came yesterday, a merciful release. —News and Observer.

One of the most destructive fires that ever raged in the South was the one at Key West. The loss is said to surely reach 1,500,000. The entire business part of the city has been consumed, throwing out of employment over 4,000 persons. There are only enough provi-week. Large shipments of necessities have been immediately dispatched them from New Orleans and other ports.

Tribute of Respect.
A called meeting of the Fayetteville bar was held at the office of Thomas H.
Sutton, Esq., on Monday afternoon, March 29th, 1886, at 5 o'clock.

On motion of W. A. Guthrie, Esq., Mr. Thomas H. Sutton was called to the chair, and on motion of Hon. R. P.
Buxton, Mr. Henry L. Cook was chosen Secretary.

After the object of the meeting had been explained, Col. C. W. Broadfoot presented the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

The members of the Fayetteville bar, called together for that purpose on the 29th of March, 1886, would give expression to their sorrow at the untimely death of their young brother, the late Philemon Holland, jr., who died in New Berne on the 26th inst. He came among us and cast his lot with us about one year ago, a stranger to all, yet so winning were his manners, so kind and gentle his disposition, so true and honorable his principles, so admirable his daily walk and conversation, so well rounded and loveable his character, that we each and all, feel today that we have lost a friend. In order that the world may know the high esteem in which we held him, and that his family may learn how near and dear he was to us, we direct this testimonial to be sent to his family, with our hearty sympathy for them in this their day of sore bereavement, that a copy be handed to the newspapers of New Berne and Fayetteville, and that the Chairman of this meeting be requested to lay the same before his Honor, the presiding Judge, at our next term, and ask their enrollment upon the minutes of the Superior Court.

Feeling and appropriate remarks upon the character and virtues of our deceased brother, the late Philemon Holland, jr., were made by Messrs. W. A.
Guthrie, Hon. R. P. Buxton, H. McD.
Robinson, Henry L. Cook, Capt. N. W.
Ray, Col. C. W. Broadfoot and the Chairman, after which there being no further business, the meeting adjourned. —THOMAS H. SUTTON, CHM'N.
HENRY L. COOK, Sec'y.

From the Observer and Gazette we clip the following further proceedings of the meeting:

In giving expression to the keen regret with which he had learned of the death of Mr. Holland, Mr. W. A. Guthrie paid a feeling tribute to the worth of the deceased. He had first met him in Raleigh, had been attracted then by his open, genial nature and sterling qualities, and subsequent acquaintance had confirmed this favorable impression.
It was chiefly through a correspondence between them that Mr. Holland had been induced to make his home here; in the brief period of his sojourn he had been an honor to the Fayetteville bar, and if his physical constitution had permitted him longer life he would have made his mark in the profession.

Judge Buxton was unwilling to allow this opportunity to pass without bearing his testimony to the estimable qualities of the deceased. To him he had been a perfect stranger until his arrival here, but he had been impressed with him as a finished gentleman, and he had proven himself an ornament to the bar; at the very time of his death he was a trusted referee in several important cases.

Mr. H. McD. Robinson, as one of the younger members of the bar, had perhaps had the most intimate acquaintance with the deceased, knowing him both as a lawyer and friend, and, while appreciating and admiring his talents, being drawn to him chiefly in his social aspect, with his winning manners and generous, whole-souled nature; through all, he had recognized in him the high-toned christian gentleman, so rare in a young man.

Mr. H. L. Cook could claim but a limited acquaintance with Mr. Holland only during the few months since he himself had become a member of the profession—but that acquaintance had left only pleasant recollections of many good qualities, and in many instances he had been indebted to the deceased for kindnesses in the work before him which were greatly appreciated; he thought this meeting eminently proper and fitting.

Capt. N. W. Ray and Col. C. W.
Broadfoot, while in fitting terms sympathizing with the sentiments expressed, hoped that they as well as the other members of the bar would have an opportunity, when the testimonial was presented to the presiding Judge of the Superior Court, of paying tribute to one whose merits and high character were so deserving of eulogy.

Mr. T. H. Sutton, with deep feeling, spoke of his close and intimate relations with Mr. Holland; he had been a member of his household, a part of his family circle, and one of the strongest and most winning characteristics of his nature was his happy disposition and his desire to see every one about him happy—evidenced even in pain, suffering and sickness. This drew to him friends, and gifted him with that rare personal magnetism so irresistible.

There being no further proceedings before the meeting, on motion it adjourned.

button," but we think ourselves uncommonly lucky since we found a sovereign remedy for pain. It is Salva-

Congressional Work.
SENATE—April 1—Almost immediately after the assembling of the Senate on motion of Mr. Edmunds it was agreed to adjourn from today until Monday.

Mr. Sewell, from the Library Committee, reported favorably a bill appropriating half a million dollars for erecting a monument in Washington, in memory of Abraham Lincoln.

Senator Van Wyck's resolution inquiring whether the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are interested corporations in the District of Columbia came in. Mr. Van Wyck made a vigorous anti-monopoly and anti-corporation speech, denouncing the influence of corporations in civil and national affairs.
At the conclusion, Mr. Van Wyck's resolution was agreed to.

At 2 p. m. the Washington Territory bill was taken up and Senator Dolph took the floor in its support.
Mr. Dolph explained the financial condition of the Territory, and argued that the people were simply able to sustain a State government, and if admitted into the Union it will soon become one of the most important States of the Republic.
Mr. Morgan spoke in support of the bill.

The committee amendments to the bill were then voted on seriatim and agreed to.
Mr. Voorhees submitted as an amendment his bill last presented (the enabling act) providing for the admission of Montana.

This remains the pending question when the bill comes up again.
At 5:23, on motion of Mr. Ingalls, the Senate went into executive session. In ten minutes the doors were reopened and the Senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE—Mr. Bland, from the Coinage Committee, reported back a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information respecting the truth of the assertion made by the business men of Massachusetts, that the Sub-Treasury agents, at Boston, refuse to pay out silver dollars.

The House went into the committee of the whole at 12:30 o'clock and at once took up the arbitration bill. Mr. O'Neill, who called up the bill, wanted general debate to close at 3 o'clock, but it was finally agreed to extend the time to 4 p. m.

Mr. Gibbs, of W. Va., took the floor and made a long speech in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Crain, of Texas, defended the bill against the adverse criticism and argued in support of its constitutionality.
During his remarks, Mr. Crain said it will become the gentlemen from Georgia and Virginia (Hammond and Daniel) to talk about the unconstitutionality of the bill, when if rumor spoke correctly they intended to vote for the political educational monstrosity, known as the Blair bill, which was the unholy offspring of an ill assorted alliance between the bleak hills and chilly atmosphere of New Hampshire, and the blue grass hills and warm air of Kentucky.

Mr. Tarsney, of Mich., a member of the Committee on Labor, defended the bill, which appealed to the highest arbitrator there was in the land—to public opinion and public judgment.

Mr. Anderson, of Kan., said the labor question, in its broad sense, was not the real question at issue, but the real question pressing upon Congress was whether legislation should be enacted to compel common carriers to perform their obligations. His opposition to the bill was that it was purely a temporary measure.

Messrs. Warner, of Mo., and Ashburn, of Pa., supported the bill.

Mr. Long, of Mass., regarded the bill as a well drawn measure. It was in line with prudent legislation and sound thinking, and was applicable to the present emergency.

Mr. Bound, of Pa., looked upon the bill as establishing a poor man's court, and therefore advocated its passage.

Mr. Cannon, of Ill., earnestly supported the bill (and thought it would be effective of much good).

result could only be secured by concession. When public opinion was behind a measure it was powerful.

In speaking to a verbal amendment, Mr. Hammod, of Ga., attacked the bill, which he asserted, instead of being a bill to protect labor; was one to prevent strikes, in the interest of the corporations, and at the expense of the United States. Every man who believed as the gentleman from Pa. (Mr. Kelly) did, that the measure was a trick and a fraud, ought to vote against it. The House proposed to crystallize into the statute law something which nobody said was good, and many people said was simply a trick to get rid of the question.

Mr. Kelley (Pa.) said that by his remarks yesterday he did not mean that the gentlemen of the Committee on Labor had deliberately perpetrated a fraud and a trick. He knew that the gentleman who could submit this bill to the workmen of the country as a provision for the speedy settlement of employers' and employees' differences were quite too innocent to deliberately attempt a fraud or trick. Mr. Powerly had done more to advance the principle of arbitration than all the frothy eloquence that (Mr. Kelley) and his associates had uttered yesterday and today. He had seen so many frauds and tricks perpetrated on workmen that he had incontinently used the words for which he now apologized to the innocent members of the Committee on Labor.

The committee then rose, and Mr.
O'Neill moved, that all debate on the first section of the bill be limited to one minute.

By a parliamentary manoeuvre Mr.
Reagan (Tex.) obtained the floor and made a constitutional argument against the bill.

Mr. Lowery (Ind.) denied the assertion that the bill was a trick and a fraud, or that it infringed upon any provision of the Constitution. The effect of the bill would be to crystallize public opinion. In his judgment, as sure as truth was omnipotent, just so sure would corporate bodies be compelled to yield to the demands of justice and right. It was a step in the right direction, it was in response to the cry of distress, it was the "ship, ahoy!" to sinking sailors.
Let Congress put this sign in the heavens as a token to labor that it would not be always depressed, and would not always be subject to the exactions of monopoly.

Pending a vote on Mr. O'Neill's motion, the House at 3:45 adjourned.
