He is one of our most gifted preachers; a safe man, prudent and genuine, a student of already fine attainments, and withal of unparalleled modesty.'

Who Pays for the Inspection of Wood?

We are requested by the inspectors of wood to publish Section 9050, Chapt. 28, of the Code of North Carolina, which reads as follows: "The board of commissioners for the county of Craven may appoint one or more inspectors of fire-wood for the town of New Berne, who shall reside therein and inspect all such wood as may be carried to the town for sale; and before entering upon their duties they shall take the oath and give the bonds required of other inspectors, and shall receive, for inspecting each cord of wood, four cents, to be paid by the purchaser."

Easter Day at Christ Church. The congregation at Christ church on Sunday morning was larger than often, even at that important festival. The floral decorations were very fine, both in tasteful arrangement, and the abundance and variety of flowers. The music was of the finest production and rendered in artistic style, while the sermon was appropriate and a forcible teaching of the doctrine of the resurrection. The offering, which it was announced, would be applied to the liquidation of the indebtedness of the Parish, we learn was a liberal one and amounted to a handsome sum.

The Sunday school celebration in the afternoon was in keeping with the morning service, and very admirably arranged and executed, in strict accordance with a neatly printed program distributed among the immense assembly of visitors; and the offerings of the classes was also very creditable to each and to the school as a body of zealous little workers.

The memorial decorations to deceased members of the Parish was elaborate and in excellent taste. And the Easter celebration as a whole, we have heard pronounced by several as the finest in all particulars of any they have ever witnessed.

Congressional Work.

SENATE—April 23.—Not in session. HOUSE—The house met at 11 o'clock in continuation of yesterday's session, and immediately went into committee of the whole, Mr. Wilborn in the chair, on the river and harbor appropriation bill. For an hour the bill was considered and some little progress made, and a few moments before noon the committee rose, the House adjourned, and the session of Friday was opened with prayer by the Chaplain. The President's message upon the labor troubles having been read by the clerk, Mr. Springer, of Illinois, moved it be referred to the committee on labor with instructions to that committee to report upon it by bill or otherwise on or before the 15th of May.

France has expressed a willingness to join in the ultimatum requiring Greece to disarm. An attempt has been made to blow up the church of San Louis in Madrid with a powerful explosive. Edison is at work on a new phonograph upon which he says sound can be amplified four times louder than the human voice.

An eminent Austrian physician, after a thorough examination of Pasteur's method of treating hydrophobia, recommends its general adoption. Ministers in a number of the Northern States are preparing to boycott Sunday papers. That seems right and proper, printers should not be compelled to work all day Sunday.

An English lady recently arrived at Orlando, Florida with nine children, a parrot, and forty pieces of baggage. An exchange remarks that in the absence of her husband, it is surmised that the poor man took to the woods at the first favorable opportunity.

The improvements still go on at the cemetery. The outside fencing has been whitened up, making old things look new. In this season of flowers our ladies have not forgotten the beloved dead.

The painters and carpenters of our town are busy building, repairing and beautifying the residences of our town. "There is life in the old land yet," says one of our enterprising merchants, and he is correct.

Henry Archbell will have a full supply of refreshments on the steamboat excursion from Kinston to Biddle's Landing next Thursday, the 29th. Every effort is being made to render the occasion enjoyable to old and young.

Several of our young people went to the depot on Thursday afternoon to get a peep at the young ladies of Peace Institute, on their way to Morehead City. A number of them took a view of Caswell monument while the train was stopped for supper.

The citizens of the several wards met on Tuesday night to nominate candidates for the office of town commissioner. The first ward nominated E. W. Canady on the first ballot; the third ward, L. W. Dawson on the second ballot; the fourth, W. D. LaRoue on the second ballot; and all hurried to the second house to see what was being done in the second ward, which nominates two candidates, making five for the four wards. Three persons were put in nomination for the two offices—E. F. Cox, F. C. Loops, and James Cummings. Attempting to nominate two commissioners at the same time seemed to confuse matters. Two ballots were taken, the other wards came in and the scene was confusion worse confounded. Several motions were made, but none of them could be understood, almost all being on their feet and most of them talking. Hub Cummings managed to say a few words in behalf of "my brother," and others would put in a word edgeways now and then. Not being able to do justice to the occasion, suffice it to say that F. C. Loops and E. F. Cox were declared duly nominated. Loud calls were made for the nominees, and the meeting adjourned with considerable excitement and grumbling. More voting and fewer motions would have given more satisfaction. Before the next ward meeting, the court house should be seated, and adopt a rule to nominate one candidate at a time, before the balloting begins.

Mr. Charles Schreiner, foreman of a large meat house in Baltimore, Md., says—"He had a sprained wrist for several weeks and began to think it was never going to get well, he was advised to try Salva-Oil, did so and it worked like magic and a few applications entirely cured him.

Mr. Hammond, of Georgia, thought that there was no reason to believe that the committee would not act diligently, and it was unusual to instruct the committee on such a matter.

Mr. Butterworth's motion was lost—yeas 77, nays 157. There being thirty minutes debate allowed under the rules Mr. Butterworth secured the floor. The object of his motion to refer the message to the committee of the whole, he said, had been considered by some gentlemen as unwise, because it could not be reached at an early day.

Every gentleman believed, or affected to believe, that the message presented a question of vast consequence to the country. It had been his purpose, if his motion had prevailed, to ask unanimous consent to fix an early day for the consideration of this question, with the hope and expectation that it might be fairly considered—not with a view to controlling elections in November, but with a view to getting at a light solution of the great problem.

Mr. Butterworth said Congress owed it to itself to take up the labor question and consider it carefully, and then refer the subject to an appropriate committee. If it were referred to a committee now he feared that the measure would be reported, representing not the needs of the hour, but the political necessities of the coming campaign.

Mr. Randall, of Pa., confessed to a feeling of surprise at the heat with which the gentleman from Ohio had approached this subject. He desired to direct attention to the fact that the Constitution made it the duty of the President from time to time to communicate to Congress touching the state of the Union and recommend such measures as he shall deem necessary and expedient. The President had not ventured a hair beyond that, and how was he met here? He was met with an assault on his motives. There was not one word against the proposition which he made. On the contrary, there was not an intelligent man in the country but knew that the present condition of the labor of the country demanded the attention of Congress. It was easy to question men's motives. He had also supposed that the right to question the motives of a human being rested with a higher power. He asked that the message should have due consideration and deliberation, and a remedy conceived for the troubles if possible enacted into a law. He declared proudly that there was not a word in it that appealed in any particular to any party or any sect or any class of men in the United States. On the contrary, it appealed to Congress as a body of American citizens, wishing for the public welfare. [Applause.]

Mr. Weaver, of Iowa, was in favor of a motion to commit with instruction that the message might be calmly considered.

Mr. Gibson, of W. Va., regretted that the gentleman from Ohio should undertake to bring politics into the discussion of this question. The gentleman had charged the majority of the House with not bringing forward a proposition which would have any practical results on the labor troubles.

Mr. O'Neill, of Illinois, said that the Arbitration bill had been discussed by the House for four days. Not one word of partisan bias had been injected into the debate. It had passed by a four-fifths vote. It had been reported unanimously by the Senate Committee. It had been endorsed by the press and by the intelligence of the country, and it rested with the gentleman from Ohio to take this pretext of injecting partisan bias into the question.

Mr. Reed, of Maine, expressed his satisfaction with the vote he had cast for the Arbitration bill. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Randall) in undertaking to excuse the President for his message was the only man who had accused him.

Mr. McCreary, of Ky., was gratified with the President's message, regarding it as a wise and forcible document. The relations between labor and capital were not as harmonious as they should be, and the message looked towards bringing them in harmony.

Mr. Springer, of Illinois, supported his motion, contending that the Committee on Labor was the proper committee to consider the message.

Mr. Springer's motion was then agreed to. Mr. Voorhees, of Washington Territory, rising to a question of privilege, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire whether Hon. L. D. M. Sweet, or any other member of the House, who has availed himself of the privilege of admission to the floor under Rule 22, is interested as agent or attorney for any railroad or other corporation, or is interested in any claim or bill pending before Congress, and report to the House the result of such inquiry, with such recommendations as may be necessary.

It had been an open secret, Mr. Voorhees said, that ever since the beginning of this Congress a powerful lobby, organized in the interest of various railroad corporations, had invested the capitol, and that the rules of the House had been openly, repeatedly and notoriously set at defiance by some members of that lobby. He protested against the continuance of that rank and crying abuse. He did not intend to reflect upon Mr. Sweet, but had inserted his name because he personally knew that Mr. Sweet was attorney for the Northern Pacific Company.

Accepting suggestions made by Mr. Blount and Mr. Randall, Mr. Voorhees modified his resolution by omitting the name of Mr. Sweet and by providing that inquiry should be carried on by a select-committee of five members. As so modified the resolution was adopted. The House then went into committee of the Whole on the private calendar.

At 4:30 the committee rose and at 4:40 the House took a recess till 7:30, the evening session to be for the consideration of pension bills.

Atlanta Months Open. Six months ago we had no demand for B. B. B. but now our retail demand is such that we are forced to buy in gross lots. We attribute the rapid and enormous demand to the comparative size and price of B. B. B. (being large bottles for $1) and its positive merit. It sells well and gives our customers entire satisfaction. Our sales have increased 500 per cent. within a few months.
