SENATE.-May 11.-The Chair laid before the Senate an invitation from the Grand Army of the Republic, Depart-ment of the Potomac, to participate in the memorial ceremonies at Arlington on decoration day, Monday, May 31st. Laid on the table.

Mr. Hoar presented a memorial of the Republican Central Committee of Ohio, charging that the election of Hon. Henry B. Payne to the U. S. Senate was secured by bribery, fraud and corruption, and requesting that the Senate in-vestigate the matter. Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

A number of petitions were presented and referred praying Congress to enact legislation against oleomargarine.

Mr. Teller modified his amendment accordingly. Considerable opposition was shown to this amendment, and on motion of Mr. June, Logan it was laid on the table.

Some discussion arose as the effect of August, Mr. Brown secured an amendment pro-yiding that the restrictions of the bill as to reduced forces should not apply to ministers of religion. Mr. Edmunds secured a similar

If it fell today, in one year nobody would remember it except to point to it as a monument of the greatest error that had ever existed in the army. He asked the man what he wanted, but without replying the negro assaulted Mr. Hall with a club, felling him to the floor. He entered a chamber and at-tacked Mrs. Hall with a club, striking herseveral blows on the head. It is thought the negro's purpose was rob-bery, but he was frightened off by hearing some one moving in the upper part of the house. An alarm was given by a m13 d3 wit little grandchild and the neighbors found the venerable couple insensible and in a critical condition. Mr. Hall is 74 years old. A posse of citizens is searching for the negro and if found he may be summarily dealt with.

After the routine morning business, the Inter State Commerce bill was taken up and its consideration resumed.

Mr. Morgan formally offered his amendment to punish by fine and imvision. While Congress had in hand the regulation of commerce between the States, it should see that travel between the State should be kept free. It was the right of the whole people to merce. Whatever tended to interfere with commerce, whether a railroad company, a mob, or a conspiracy of individuals, was something that Congress should regulate, and Congress could not escape this duty if it undertook to do anything at all in connection with Inter-State commerce. In moving the amendment, Mr. Morgan knew he was running against the powerful sentiment of a large class of people who had asserted the right to interrupt at pleasure the movement of commerce between States; but every man concerned-certainly every American-born citizenwhen he should consider the matter. would say that it was the duty of Congress to exercise its power against any-thing that would interfere with the commerce of the country. Mr. Vest did not think the Constitution gave Congress any right over the question with which the amendment dealt. Besides, experience of the past few weeks showed that the States vere entirely competent to deal with these matters. So far as Missouri was concerned, whenever any appeal had been made to the power of the State, it had been responded to. Mr. Teller and Mr. Maxey agreed with Mr. Vest and Mr. Cullom and Mr. Platt feared the amendment would embarrass and perhaps imperil the passage of the bill, and so opposed Mr. Morgan's amendment. Finally the amendment amendment. Finally the amendment was laid on the table—yeas 49, nays 3. Mr. Brown offered an amendment providing for the punisment of persons injuring the property of railroad com-panies, tracks, bridges, etc. The amendment would make it a felony to maliciously injure such property, and if death resulted from the injury then the offense should constitute murder. the offense should constitute murder.
