THE MAN WHO DID THE DUCKING.

In the Century Magazine, in an article by Gen. J. G. Walker describing the battle of Sharpsburg or Antietam, mention is made of the burning by the troops of H. H. Hill's division of Mumma's house to deprive the Federal forces of the shelter it might have afforded in their retreat.

SUNDAY LAWS.

When the law was given to Moses amid the thunderings of Mount Sinai, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," prominent in the decalogue, and right following it was "Six days shalt thou labor and do all that thou hast to do."

That there has always been difference in the opinions of good men as to the proper observance of the Sabbath day, under the Christian dispensation, is well known.

Some would make it a day of gloomy reticence, from the world in all respects save only attending public worship.

Others would take the other view and make it a divided release from all and devote a part to devotional exercises and a part to healthful recreation and innocent amusement.

ing open places of business on Sunday. This all the prohibition seeks to enforce, and the prohibitory clause which says "Six days shalt thou labor," which was probably intended to enforce the prohibitory clause, because the man who puts in six days of faithful labor in the week is entitled to a day of rest.

A law to compel men to work the six days would be an infringement of their liberties, and would be a violation of the great principle of liberty.

Children and Young Ladies. The companionship of an older lady of the right sort, who is kind, with a broad reputation of gayeties and innocent follies of her own youth, is a pleasure rather than a restraint to well disposed young girls.

There are, in America, few places where it is proper for young girls to be at all, where they may so properly be unchaperoned, excepting, of course, in the evening, if they will conduct themselves as quietly and modestly as ladies should.

There are other girls who regard the presence of an older companion as an excuse for conspicuous behavior, in which they would not dare to indulge in unprotected. But there are more who justly consider that simplicity and dignity of manner are a sufficient protection, and who can enjoy themselves in public places or upon some excursion with no feeling of shame or anxiety or bravado.

These young ladies are certainly no less respected, nor are they more thoughtless in the pursuit of pleasure than those who are found scrambling among rocks or walking along sunny beaches on sultry afternoons, accompanied by young, perspiring aunts and mothers who can only long hopelessly for hampocks and paternal fians, while their irksome young charges enjoy themselves with clear consciences, secure in the possession of a chaperon as ordained by fashionable society.
