Death of Richard Daugherty.
Dr. H. G. Bates, coroner, held an inquest over the dead body of Richard Daugherty near Dover on Friday, and the verdict of the jury (which he came to his death by causes unknown to them.)

Notice.
The case is the case, front what we could gather from Dr. Bates, are these: On Saturday, Sept. 4th, Richard Daugherty was before Justice W. F. Mills, at Griffin's store, near Dover, upon the charge of larceny of a cow. He was required by the justice to give bond in the sum of two hundred dollars for his appearance at the next term of the Superior court, and was placed in the custody of the constable. It was then after night, Daugherty asked permission of the constable to step across the road to ask a man to stand his bond. It was granted, and he was not seen any more until found dead in a field five days afterwards about a half mile from the store. His body was in a horrible condition, and was only recognized by his clothing and a few articles in his pocket.

Notice.
The supposition is that he ran through the bushes to the field and was bitten by a poisonous snake, of which there are plenty in that section, and died before relief could reach him.

Industrial Education.
Our townsman, Mr. Geo. Allen, is an enthusiastic advocate of industrial education. He is in favor of learning a boy or girl that to earn their living by the sweat of the brow is no disgrace; that to be useful citizens, they must be independent, and what he means by independence is one who can obtain a decent and respectable livelihood by his own skill and industry and not depend on the fortune left by his father or that he may perchance get by marriage.

Notice.
As a sort of an experimental school he has set aside a room on his premises on Johnson street, and supplied it with tools for his own little son and one or two of his neighbors' boys. In two weeks after the opening of this miniature school, as it were, Master Lockett Yess, a boy about ten or twelve years of age, has turned out a handsome miniature sharpie. It is fifty-two inches long, fourteen and one-half inches breadth of beam, with masts and sails, and weighs eleven and one-half pounds. On each side of her bow is painted the word "Mary." The model, work, painting and lettering would do credit to much older hands and one whose hands had been trained for the use of tools.

Notice.
It is a fair illustration of what industrial education might do if properly inaugurated and conducted. We hope to see the time come when every public school of any importance will have its industrial department.

Executive Committee Elected.

The Oyster Survey of North Carolina Waters.

Church Services To-day.
The schooner Scoresby was anchored at Dennison's mill yesterday taking a supply of water, and while there was boarded by a JOURNAL reporter whose mission was to talk to the commander, Lieut. Winslow, on the oyster business in North Carolina.

Church Services To-day.
The Lieutenant received us in a very gentlemanly manner, and after a few minutes' pleasant conversation in company with Lieut. Hand, of the outer Stevens, we retired to the cabin, where he spread out maps showing the entire area of oyster grounds in Pamlico, Core and Bogue sounds and their tributaries. The survey has been about completed in the Carteret county waters and he finds about 83,000 acres of bottom more or less suitable for the cultivation of oysters. Sixty thousand of these, he says, can be made available within the next five or ten years.

Church Services To-day.
One feature of Lieut. Winslow's work is the locating of what is termed "natural beds" which seem, as the law now stands, a stumbling block in the way of investments in oyster culture. By fixing the location of these and determining what are "natural beds," the General Assembly can legislate much more intelligently on the subject. He has marked on his maps the location of these beds in Bogue and Core sounds and all their tributaries, and will soon begin work in Pamlico sound and its tributaries, examining bottoms and locating the natural beds.

Church Services To-day.
Lieut. Winslow is an expert in judging oyster bottoms has no superior and but few equals. He has surveyed the waters of the Chesapeake and other bottoms, and he says the bottoms in Carteret county compare most favorably with these. He finds less than three per cent of the available bottoms in the waters of Carteret utilized for the cultivation of the oyster. He regards it as a most inviting field for capital, provided the proper laws could be enacted. With the oyster supply constantly decreasing it is really surprising that such a large area of suitable bottoms should remain untouched. The cultivation of the oyster has proven a profitable business in less favorable waters, and why not here? That there is something wrong about the laws that have been enacted concerning this business is very palpable, and this survey will doubtless lead to measures that will develop one of the most profitable industries in the State.

Church Services To-day.
As the reporter was about to leave, Lieut. Winslow requested him to state that the oyster known as the "green gill" was as good as any oyster. This is not only his individual opinion but that of scientific men who have given it critical examination. Many of our oyster dealers, but more especially our oyster eaters, discard this oyster as not being wholesome on account of the greenish color, but the Lieutenant assures us that it is a good oyster.

The re-instatement of Alexander, Prince of Bulgaria, to the throne, was only for a few days and his departure from Sofia for Darmstadt, Germany, his parental home, was very affecting. Everything was done to make the Prince feel that the populace looked upon his leaving as only temporary. The vice-president of the assembly, in his farewell address to the Prince, said the nation would continue to consider him as their ruler. The Prince replying, said: "I hope to see you all again soon." Along the line of travel ovals were showered upon him and especially enthusiastic were they at Pesth and Vienna. Falling to be backed by Germany and Austria, Alexander was forced to yield to the demands of Russia. An element among the subjects of the Prince was under German influence, and had been reminded that the throne of a ruler would no doubt have followed. This, says the Oar, is why he demanded the abdication of the Bulgarian ruler.

Death of Glover J. Bryan.

Church Services To-day.
Last week we briefly noticed the sudden death of Mr. Bryan, one of the oldest and most trusted engineers on the Richmond & Danville Railroad. On Sunday morning, Aug. 29, he brought in his train, and went to his home on Ashboro street, feeling ill. That night he had a congestive chill, and continued to grow worse until Monday night, when he became unconscious. Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. he died. Wednesday afternoon he was buried in Green Hill Cemetery. Religious services were conducted at the house by Rev. J. A. Cunningham.

Church Services To-day.
Mrs. Bryan was born at New Bern, N. C., Dec. 30th, 1844, and was at the time of her death a comparatively young man. He was an engineer on the R. & D. sixteen years, and during all that time was faithful to his duty and ever at his post. He was conscientious, painstaking, and careful. He leaves a wife and six young children. He had life insurance to the amount of $15,000.—Greenboro North Star.

REPUBLICAN SPEAKING AT JAMES CITY.

By a Special Reporter.

We were over to hear J. E. O'Hara speak at James City Friday night. It was O'Hara's appointment, but he agreed to divide time with Abbott. The hall was opened by a controversy as to who should speak first, as Collins was on the ground. At last O'Hara got the stump, and he stated that he should speak for half an hour, give Abbott a half hour for reply, and take a half hour for rejoinder. His speech was to the point, and he very forcibly arraigned the Abbott faction as a rabble crowd and in no wise regular in their proceedings, he, O'Hara, being the one, only and regular Republican nominee, and all others being imitations of the deepest dye.

Abbott followed by giving him a hit as to his conduct at Washington, absenting himself from the capital, and hiring white teachers for his children and having a white cook, paying his cook and teacher $30 and $75 per month respectively, etc. Said O'Hara did not claim to be a negro, as his father was Spanish and his mother was Irish, and the people were tired of half-white negroes they wanted genuine Africans and he thought he was black enough to fill the bill.

O'Hara arose to reply, when the Jim Town brass band struck up and he had to desist, but he held his ground. When the music let up he said that he was glad the rabble crowd had acted that way, as it would make votes for him everywhere. The band got louder and the people got wrathful, so a justice of the peace stopped the music, when O'Hara said that it showed the Abbott faction could not stand argument and the attempt to stifle the meeting by such proceedings was beneath the dignity of free men and gentlemen, and that the people of James City should teach a crowd, who would bring such discredit upon their community, a lesson not to be forgotten.

Collins was called for and gave them a whooping up on his war record. Then came Phillip Wiggins, the great untamed. Phillip was supposed to reply to Mr. Collins in favor of Geo. White, but he forgot all about it and made a Hahn speech. James followed Wiggins, but he did not suit the crowd, and amidst the confusion that followed we left.

Kinston Items.
The rice and corn crops of this county are unusually fine and promising. Success in this line always gives the county abundant soap and plenty of back bones.

The fall stock of store goods is arriving and business here is looking up although there is but a very limited amount of money in circulation. Times will improve, however, when cotton begins to move more freely.

The announcement of a meeting of the prohibitionists here on the 15th inst. has aroused the hopes of that party and caused a flutter among the politicians of both of the old parties. No one yet knows what the outcome of the meeting will be, but the prohibitionists seem to think something will turn up to show politicians by whom the balance of power in this county is controlled.

The register of deeds, Geo. L. Hodges, is always up with his official work. The tax list for this year is now ready and waiting for the taxpayers. The aggregate value of real and personal property this year foots up $3,286,975, being a decrease of about $64,000 as compared to last year. This decrease is doubtless caused by the high taxes of last year, property always declining in value as taxes run up.

The political muddle in Lenoir county is getting too thick for the usual "strainer rag" to filter. Personal begging is "no good," the party lash hurts not, even possum whiskey fails to settle the muddle, while the people of all parties are mad and all appear to have "method in their madness." Perhaps "coalition" may settle the matter here and bring us to a "good government and to a promising future." We shall see.

Capl. W. S. Bly, county superintendent of education, held his usual educational survey here during the latter part of last week, examining applicants for certificates as public school teachers. A good number of both races attended and were thoroughly examined. The attendance of female applicants at the white race largely exceeds that of males, while colored applicants are about equally divided as to sex. This, we think, is an indication that the education of the children of the white race is passing into the care and training of females. The superintendent does his work thoroughly, with fairness to applicants and justice to the cause of education. Considering, however, the number of beautiful female applicants who attended these levees, we humbly suggest widower fields or widower looms for the next county superintendent.
