CHARLESTON.

A Million Dollars Needed for House Repairs.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 14.—Ex-Gov. Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Col. E. B. Gray arrived here yesterday and spent today examining the effects of the earthquake and consulting with the mayor and the committee on relief. The object of Gov. Fairchild's visit is to see whether it is necessary to make an appeal to the Grand Army of the Republic for assistance for Charleston. The situation has been fully explained to him.

He telegraphs an address to his comrades of the Grand Army, that the situation is that there is a class of citizens whose houses are more or less shattered and who have no means wherewith to repair them." This class and those who being houseless have nevertheless suffered loss of personal property require aid from abroad. It will be to them a continued calamity unless help is rendered. I feel confident that every comrade is anxious to do what he can to bring comfort and happiness to this stricken people. I therefore request department commanders to call upon each post in their department to at once appoint a committee which shall collect such sums as the comrades and their fellow-citizens in cities, villages and on farms may desire to contribute, to be sent to W. A. Courtenay, mayor of Charleston."

The city council of Charleston today adopted, unanimously, a resolution tendering their thanks to the entire staff and employees of the News and Courier for the energy and pluck displayed by them in the continuous publication of their paper during all the excitement and confusion consequent upon the recent earthquake.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—At a meeting of the relief committee of the chamber of commerce, held this afternoon, treasurer Jno. Crosby Brown reported that he had received subscriptions to date amounting to $59,713, and he was authorized to send a further $20,000 to the mayor of Charleston. Letters were received from the vicinity of Charleston, asking assistance, and they were referred to the mayor of Charleston for his consideration. Wm. E. Dodge, chairman of the committee, stated that he had received a letter from mayor Courtenay, in which he said that climatic and sanitary reasons now compelled a return to such houses as were habitable. They could live for a time without plastering and other discomforts and the people were all cheerful and more calm, and he added that the people of Charleston would hold as beyond price, through all time, their identification with the common American citizenship which came to them in their great trials, strong to help, strong to lift up. Charleston would never forget all that had been done for her. Dr. Simonds, president of the First national bank of Charleston, suggested that a building association should be formed to loan money at a low rate of interest to the people of Charleston for rebuilding the city and the suggestion was referred to the committee for consideration.

At the meeting of the relief committee today it was stated that it will take at least $1,000,000 to put necessary repairs to houses of persons who are utterly unable, unaided, to make their houses safe and habitable. Forms of application for assistance in rebuilding will be issued tomorrow and plans completed likewise for giving limited pecuniary relief to those in need of clothing, bedding, etc., in consequence of the earthquake.

Bricklayers are now paid $5 a day and plasterers $4, which tends to check the rebuilding operations.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 14.—A envelope collection was made today for the benefit of the Charleston earthquake sufferers and $1,148.83 were realized.

Influence of a Name.

In those ancient days when a name meant something, the Hebrews used to characterize ignominious persons as "men without a name," and people of good repute as "men with a name." An illustration of the influence of a "man with a name" may be seen in the singular reverence which a tribe of warlike and plundering negroes once paid to sundry supplies belonging to Dr. Livingstone.

The erratic explorer had been in the wilds of Africa for months, and nothing had been heard from him. Dr. Moffat, his father-in-law, determined to send him letters and supplies. In order to accomplish this, he secured from the chief of the Matebele a party of men to serve as bearers.

They carried the supplies, made up into bundles, on their shoulders; and, as privileged persons, bearing the packages of a missionary, they crossed the border country in safety, and descended into the valley of the Zambesi, where their sworn enemies, the Makololo, lived.

But, as Livingstone, when last heard from, was exploring their country, it was only through them that the supplies could reach him. The Matebele bearers, therefore, presented themselves on the south bank of the river, at a spot where they could shout across to an island inhabited by some of their foes, and announce their errand.

Africans are suspicious of each other, and small as was the Matebele party, no one of the Makololo would approach it, for fear of treachery. The bearers laid their packages on the bank, delivered their message across the stream, and departed hungry and foot sore.

The Makololo waited until they were sure that the party had gone, then they crossed over, brought the bundles to the island, piled them in a heap, and built a roof over them. Months afterwards, when Livingstone returned from his journey to the west coast, he was thankful to find these letters and supplies waiting him. The reverence felt for his good name had preserved them intact.—Youth's Companion.

Marion's Diplomacy.

One of the stories which used to stimulate the patriotism of American boys is that of Marion's inviting a British officer to dine with him on roasted potatoes and cold water. The story has been doubted by certain critical historians, but Dr. Joseph Johnson, of South Carolina, says it is substantially true. He heard it when a child from his father, to whom it was told just after its occurrence.

But the story as originally told illustrated Marion's diplomacy rather than his poverty and self-denial.

The officer, a young man, sensitive, humane, and high-toned, had been sent, under a flag of truce, to Marion's camp to transact some business with the general. After the business had been completed, the general's aide invited the officer to dine with them.

He would have had a good dinner, if Marion, seeing his character, had not determined to make an impression on his sensitive nature favorable to the American cause.

The young man, having been invited to dine with Marion, and having excused himself to the aide, was provided by his host with a dinner of sweet potatoes roasted in the ashes of the hearth, and served on bark platters. The officer noticed that the general, in peeling his potatoes, put the skins carefully on one side of his plate, instead of throwing them on the ground.

Oscar, the general's servant and foster-brother, waited on them. He was always called "Budde," a corruption of brother, by Marion, who, after dinner, said to him,—

"Budde, bring us something to drink." Oscar brought a gourdful of water, and handed it to the officer and then to the general.

"Budde, bring up Roger," and the general's horse, being led up, was fed with the potato skins.

The officer saw and was conquered. He returned to the British camp, and resigned his commission, saying he could not fight against men who were so conscientious in their opposition to king and parliament as to drink nothing but water, eat nothing but potatoes, and feed their horses on the skins.—Youth's Companion.

An Old Citizen Speaks.

Mr. J. M. Norris, an old resident of Rome, Ga., says, that he had been badly troubled with kidney complaint for a great many years and with eczema for three years, at times could scarcely walk and had tried many remedies without benefit, until he began taking Electric Bitters and anointing his hands and feet with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. This treatment afforded him great relief and he strongly recommends Electric Bitters to all who suffer with kidney complaints, or need a blood purifier. Sold by Hancock Bros.
