Survey, arrived yesterday, written to the Medical Record, of New York, from North Carolina, by one of the young members of the profession, judging from the tenor of his letteri

The writer makes some severe stric tures upon the originators of the bill passed by the last General Assembly of North Carolina making it a misdemeanor for any one to practice medicine or sur gery without having procured a certificate from the State Medical Board, or a diploma from some reputable medical college issued prior to January, 1880.

We think the writer is entirely mistaken as to the motives which prompted the introduction and passage of the act men were in the city yesterday to at. by the General Assembly. Why they should go back and require examinations from the year 1880, and no further, fendant not being ready the preliminary we are not prepared to say; but the question of enacting such a law has been discussed repeatedly, and the General Assembly finally come to the conclusion-and rightly we think-that if it was necessary that a man should be required to know a certain amount of law before being licensed to practice, or to become the legal adviser of his neighbors, it was far more necessary that he should know something about the laws of health and the manner of treating diseases before being licensed to Lathers McChames's many literals to practice medicine, or to assume the claims.

Let the property of the property of the medicine of the medical adviser of his family.

In the light that this correspondent In the light that this correspondent puts it, however, it apparently works a hardship on the younger members of the profession, but this will soon disappear and the law will stimulate the young men to better prepare themselves for their noble profession.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 14, 1886. While I sat last night taking a retro spective view of the past twenty-two or more years, and more particularly contemplating the terrible ordeal that our good old town passed, through about the close of the war and just after it, I recalled an act of daring on the part of a sojourner in our midst at that timethe present honorable and honored Mayor of the city of Wilmington, N.
