A TRIP TO MT. MITCHELL.

The Mt. Mitchell hotel, where I emerald. Away to the east, the range descends to the valley in a the summer, is situated in the regular series of steps forming a the summer, is situated in the bosom of a lovely valley formed by the Swannanoa river and numerous small creeks. To my eye, this valley with its serpentine river, its creeks winding under interwoven vines and boughs of clustering An Unexpected Result of the Competitrees, its green grass waving in the wind, and its girdle of lefty mountains, is the gem of Western Carolina. It is eight miles wide, and extends towards the west as far as the eye can reach till it unites with the valley of the French Broad, and then sweeps away to the foot of the great Smoky Mountains, which lean in the distance like a huge wall against the sky. On the east and south it is hemmed in by the Blue Ridge like a great rampart thrown up by nature to protect the fertile valley below. Looking toward the north, the vision sweeps wer green pastures and undulating hills, over great forests which clothe the foot of the Craggy, and finally, taking in peak after peak, rests upon the rough crags of that noble range which forms an impos-ing background to the smiling valley. There is something so Arcadian about the spot that one seems in another world. The sub-ing for a boy to make a soldier of

The stream, clear ascrystal and cold as ice, ripples swiftly along over its pebbly bed, the micascous forma-tion of which imparts to it a bright golden color. This restless river twists and turns so in its marrow valley that we cross it six times in the distance of three miles, my horse insisting upon drinking at every ford, and sometimes, de-ceived by the clear water, stepping into pools up to his neck. All along the river we get exquisite views of the Craggies, which far surpass any range in the State in beauty of outline. They are isgr-pressibly beautiful this morning with their bold outlines sharply defined against the blue of the sky, defined against the blue of the sky, and their sharp peaks, clad in vel-vety shrubs, all aglow in the rays of the morning sun which has only risen high enough to tip the tops of the mountains. Huge blocks of mica scattered through the green shrnbbery glisten in the sunshine like great diamonds set in a bed of gigantic staircase - probably the favorite promenade of the old agree who wcre.the seven-league boots.

tive Examination System.

EDITOR SUN:-A gray-haired army officer, serving on the plains, tells me that a wonderful change has taken place in the service within ten years, that poker play-ing has almost ceased, that there is but little drinking, and that the morale of the young officers has steadily improved. And he adds something else, which I think is sufficiently important to be made public. He affirms that the Northern Congressmen's selection of can-didates for cadetships in West Point through competitive examination has resulted in an inferior clars. of officers, and that the brains of the young army, the courage, en-terprise, ambition, sense of honor, and all the soldierly instincts are
