A Live Concordance.

Though Daniel Webster's fame rests chiefly upon his oratorical powers, he was remarkable, too, for his familiarity with the Bible. His colleagues once nicknamed him the Biblical Concordance of the United States Senate. While a mere lad he read the Bible with such power and expression that the passing teamsters, who stopped to water their horses, used to get "Webster's boy" to come out beneath the shade of the trees and read the Bible to them.

Those who heard Mr. Webster, in later life, recite passages from the Hebrew prophets and psalms, say that he held them spellbound, while each passage, even the most familiar, came home to them in a new meaning. One gentleman says that he never received such ideas of the majesty of God and the dignity of man as he did one clear night when Mr. Webster, standing in the open air, recited the eighth psalm.

Webster's mother observed an other old fashion of New England in training her son. She encouraged him to memorize such scriptural passages as impressed him. The boy's retentive memory, and his sensitiveness to Bible metaphors and to the rhythm of the English version, stored his mind with scripture.

On one occasion the teacher of the district school offered a jack-knife to the boy who should recite the greatest number of verses from the Bible. When Webster's turn came he arose and recited off so many verses that the master was forced to cry "Enough!" It was the mother's training and the boy's delight in the idioms and the music of the King James version that made him the "Biblical Concordance of the Senate."

But these two factors made him more than a "concordance." The Hebrew prophets inspired him to eloquent utterances. He listened to them until their vocabulary and idioms, as expressed in the King James translation, became his mother-tongue. Of his lofty utterances it may be said, as Wordsworth said of Milton's poetry, they are "Hebrew in soul." Therefore they project themselves into the future.

The young man who would be a writer that shall be read, or an orator whom people shall hear, should study the English Bible. Its singular beauty and great power as literature, the thousand sentiments and associations which have attached to it, have made it a mightier force than any other book.

HOBKINS, Mrs. N. C., March 1, 1886.

For fifteen years my liver and kidneys have been badly affected—not a day in that time without the headache. Since using the B. B.—Botanic Blood Balm—I have been entirely relieved of pain, no trouble at all, and I feel almost like another person. I am one among the greatest advocates of B. B. and you are at liberty to name my name.
