THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

As we predicted, the President's message is a long document, but not too long considering the many important topics presented.

The document seems to us to be eminently plain and business-like. It is a calm, clear presentation of our relations with foreign governments.

In his remarks concerning Liberia, the President wisely says that it is against our traditions to extend a formal protectorate over that remote country.

The President refers to the condition of the Treasury. The surplus is now $93,956,588.56—an increase over the preceding year of $30,492,817.29.

The President holds on to his views concerning the law of compulsory coinage of silver. He recommends that the necessary coast defenses should be constructed.

He should then be confronted with a vast quantity of money, the medium of the people hoarded in the treasury when it should be in their hands.

He sees the great wrong and injury done the people by this excessive and needless drain upon their pockets.

It is a foul wrong perpetrated under the forms of law, and is systematized robbery in its most flagrant manifestation.

It is the worst phase of the extortion of such a surplus through a perversion of the relations between the people and this government.

Under such an arbitrary, unwise, flagitious system the government becomes the enemy and oppressor of the people instead of being their protector and their friend.

It is a full variety of other goods, usually kept in a first-class store. Goods delivered at any part of the city free of charge.

Goods delivered at any part of the city free of charge.

It extorts that which is necessary for the comfort of the people and when there is no justifying cause whatever.

The President is clear, direct and actually happy in that part of the message which deals with this subject of the surplus.

He is clear in his statement that the taxation today, in 1886, and twenty-one and a half years after peace is declared, is as high upon an average as it was in the very heat and tempest of the war.

The President stands squarely for the civil service law. He is very much wedded to it, and he believes that upon its underlying principle depends the surest guarantee of safety and success of American institutions.

The people are in favor of Reform. The Democrats are just as strong for it as Mr. Cleveland.

Our civil service reform may be imperfect in some of its details; it may be misunderstood and opposed; it may not always be faithfully applied.

The plain truth is this: The Democrats in 1884, were in earnest in their efforts to drive from power the Republican party.

A high sense of right and justice prevails among the moneyed and laboring classes the serious jars and frictions will disappear.

The President thinks that the government should pay the negroes who were robbed by that legalized thief, the Freedman's Bank.
