Fifty Cents Costs.
There is considerable complaint against ex-Sheriff Hahn for adding fifty cents cost to the taxes now paid by each individual. We had a communication from Yaboboro on the subject a few days ago, but it has been misplaced and we don't know exactly the ground of complaint further than the fact that the writer was charged fifty cents. It is to be presumed that the Sheriff charges only what the law allows him. He is required to collect and pay in the taxes by a certain time, and we suppose it is a matter of choice with him whether he grants further indulgence or not after giving the proper notice. We think it would have aided the Sheriff to have given notice in the columns of the JOURNAL when the time of collecting by districts or adding cost would begin to be felt.

Steamer Movements.

The steamer Trent arrived last night from Jolly Old Field with 4,500 bushels of rice for Goldsboro mills.

The L. H. Cutler arrived from Trenton and landings below on Trent river with a cargo of cotton, etc.

The Carolina arrived from Contentnea river with cotton.

Our attention being attracted, we joined the crowd in front of Bell's jewelry window, and after viewing the extensive and beautiful display of jewelry, gems and novelties, we were led to believe the cry of dull times a hoax, for while Mr. Bell is noted for his push, pluck and enterprise, he is a man of too much business qualifications to expend so much for the stock of jewelry he shows this season unless a certainty of fair return was assured. We wish his efforts all the success it deserves and judging from the continued growth of his business year after year, we are not alone in this.

The following notice from the Wayne Democratic Press of Lyons, N. Y., of one of our Northern immigrants will be read with interest by his many friends in this section. Mr. Blakeley appeared among us soon after the war and engaged largely in the shingle business. He, we are inclined to believe, found it profitable, and as a business man he has proved true as steel. He stands as high at Washington, where he operates, as he possibly can at Lyons or elsewhere.

Mr. L. M. Blakeley gave a dinner Saturday evening in honor of his friend, Colonel Patrick Donan, late of Florida, now of Fargo, Dakota. Eleven gentlemen of this village were invited to meet him. The dinner was an elegant affair and Mr. B. supported his well-known reputation as a host in every particular. Colonel Donan is a brilliant journalist, widely traveled and well-known in the society circles of the country. He was one of the most dashing partisan commanders of the late southern confederacy. He is the possessor of that social tact and polish for which the southern gentlemen are so deservedly celebrated. The Colonel's varied experiences told with graceful modesty, marked with keen observation and adorned with genial humor, made him a most delightful companion. Mr. B.'s guests express the strongest sense of the elegant hospitality they enjoyed. Mr. Blakeley is to be congratulated and thanked for his successful inauguration of a form of social entertaining which is unfortunately too rare in Lyons. The affair was in every respect a complete success. The host was inimitable, the dinner was capital, the Colonel more than entertaining, the guests appreciative and the champagne abundant and fine.

The J. M. White Disaster.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—A Daily News special from New Orleans says: Fully forty-five of the passengers and crew of the ill-fated steamer Jan. M. White are still missing. Of those thirty are negro laborers, who took passage on the boat at the landing just above the point where the accident occurred. It is believed that at least twenty perished.

Capt. Musey, the commander of the steamer, was ill in his room at the time the steamer was discovered to be on fire. He was awakened by the alarm and ran from his room to the upper deck to find that the retreat to the deck below was already cut off by the flames. He swung out from the upper deck on a chain and in this way reached the bank.

Afterward he tried to return and assist those still on board, but discovered that he would lose his own life if he persisted. He then organized a relief force from the bank, and superintended the sailor, Pearson, in a yawl to rescue those struggling in the water. Pearson's conduct during the confusion was most heroic. Pushing his way through the crowd of shrieking passengers at the steamer's stern he cut a yawl loose from its fastenings, and after a desperate struggle lowered it to the water. Four negroes jumped into the boat and cut the painter, but the sailor forced them back, and taking twenty human beings into the yawl, landed them safe on shore. Then rowing quickly back he saved twenty more. On the third trip he rescued nine and on the fourth trip three. By the time he reached shore on the last trip all that remained of the steamer was her hull. Capt. Musey said last night that he did not think more than five of the cabin passengers and ten of the deck hands perished. His estimate is regarded as very low.

Forty-Ninth Congress—Second Session

SENATE.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Mr. Allison, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back a joint resolution for the payment of the December salaries of officers and employees of Congress on the 30th of December. Passed.

Petitions from tobacco manufacturers in St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Lynchburg, Durham, N. C., and other cities, protesting against the passage of House bill in reference to packing cut tobacco, were presented by Messrs. Vest and Ransom, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Blair offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Finance to inquire into the propriety of reporting the bill providing for a rebate on all imported materials incorporated with domestic material or converted into other articles and exported to foreign countries for sale, thereby providing for an extensive foreign trade, without reducing the prices of American labor. Adopted.

The calendar was then taken up, and under the single objection rule a bill was passed by a vote of 24 to 17, to permit owners of American vessels and their cargoes to sue the government for losses caused by collision with United States vessels arising from their mismanagement.

Among other matters on the calendar which were laid over under objection were Mr. Riddleberger's resolution that all matters other than those relating to treaties shall be considered in open session.

Mr. Beck, alluding to his remarks yesterday as to the Judiciary Committee having acted in bad faith, disclaimed any intention of being offensive, and said that if they were so construed he retracted them.

Mr. Pugh said that he certainly had construed Mr. Beck's remarks as personally offensive. His statement now was entirely satisfactory and gratifying and it relieved him (Pugh) from a necessity which would have been very painful.

A bill to repeal the tenure of office act was then taken up and Mr. Edmunds spoke against it. He argued that if executives of the State governments could not be trusted (as they were not) with kingly power, it was still more important that the national executive should not be trusted with such power. Philosophical analogy, analogy of the public safety, preservation of liberty against the executive power and executive corruption, made it more important on a question of policy that the President of the United States should not possess entire ius dispensandi of every official act of every official person in the United States, than it was that the executive of the State should not possess it. The tenure of office law was a restraint now, although the President was making a great number of suspensions. The passage of the pending bill would be an invitation—more than an invitation—it would be a recognition, an approval of the idea that on purely political grounds of opinion the President ought (as his predecessors had done before tenure of office law in 1867) to remove from office immediately every body who did not agree with him, or with some department officer or with the party. He thought that that would be a step twenty five years backward in the progress of removing worthy operatives of the government from the mere condition of political fortune and prize and stakes. He believed that all these offices ought to be held for fixed terms, and he was perfectly willing that the President might for every vacancy select a man of his own political persuasion. If there was to be a change a couple of years hence (as he trusted and hoped and believed there would be) all these matters would then be removed from mere strife, and the spoils and contention of politics.

[At this point Mr. Edmunds was attacked with a fit of coughing which forced him to resume his seat.]

Mr. George made a constitutional and historical argument in favor of the bill. Mr. Everts addressed the Senate, stating that he would vote for the bill and that the grounds of constitutional-ity would not cover his vote, but that the ground of expediency would. "If removals from office," he said, "were to turn on two concurrent judgments, where the President and Senate might be opposed in politics it would follow that the repugnance of the Senate might keep a man in office whom the President desired to dispense with, and by whose action the President could not accomplish his duty."

At the close of Mr. Everts' speech the Senate went into executive session, and when the doors were re-opened adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
On motion of Mr. Burrows, of Mich., Senate bill was passed amending sections 47, 46 and 47, 47 R. S. (These sections provide for the payment of pensions out of the naval pension fund, to every person who "served as an enlisted person in the navy or marine corps," and the bill is designed to cover the cases of those who actually rendered the same service as appointed petty officers, although not actually enlisted. It applies to about one hundred men, who have acted as yeomen, engineers, apothecaries and masters at arms.)

On motion of Mr. Wise, of Va., Senate bill was passed providing that Admirals Roman and Warden May, after forty years service, be retired from active service on their own applications, with the highest pay of the grade to which they belong.

The House in the morning re-considered in committee of the Whole the consideration of Senate bill for the allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians.

A number of amendments recommended by the committee on Indian Affairs were adopted, and the committee having risen, the bill was passed.

Lines To My Friend.

Dr. Barker, you no longer
On this sinful world shall roam
Loving Jesus thought it proper
To call thee to thy home.
You have crossed o'er River Jordan
Through the celestial gate
So happy with your Saviour
A bright shining crown you'll take.

So my dear friend, you should not
Mourne
At the will of God;
He has gone down like the setting sun
Now the victory he has won;
All his work on earth is done;
He is resting by the Saviour's side
In Heaven now, and always shall abide.
So cast all your grief aside.

I know your heart is sad and sore
And you are filled with despair,
But God he afflicts his chosen ones,
So my friend, do not mourn
Even if he has chosen your husband for his own.

I know it is hard to give him up
And you think your lot is hard,
But he is happy, free from pain,
And would not enter this world again.
For he sleeps the blessed sleep of peace
That we have got to sleep,
God is waiting for us now,
Our years on earth may be few
We must meet our loss with Christian faith

And feel as if our time is near
In God's presence we'll appear
Then you can see his face.

My heart is sad for you, my friend,
For the sting of death is hard,
Although you know he is in Heaven,
So happy with his God.
For we are selfish with our love
And want to keep them near,
But this world is full of trouble
So wipe away your tear.

Still there is a consolation
For your poor wounded heart,
That when you enter the celestial gate
You'll never, no, never part.
While crossing the River Jordan
He'll meet you on the way
The road will seem so easy
Then you'll never go astray.

Now let this be a healing balm
To your poor wounded heart,
Think of the ties on earth, my friend,
As well as the ties in Heaven.
Your children they will comfort you
And help you bear your grief,
Your friends all have aching hearts
So let this give you some relief.

The Saviour is so kind,
Has washed his sins away,
Cleansed him with His precious blood,
So wipe your tears away,
His work on earth is done,
Rest for his weary feet,
The golden gate he has entered,
His happiness is complete.

Mothers.
Often neglect and delay in giving proper attention to their children who have become unhealthy. Place your sickly daughter upon the use of B. B. B.
as a tonic and general regulator, give it to your weak and feeble children, prescribe it to your husband and soon as a general tonic and appetizer before breakfast, and they will never have any use for whiskey bitters.

$50,000 to Wake Forest College.

The friends of Wake Forest College and of education generally throughout the State will read with delight the appended letter and will forever bless the noble generous-hearted man, whose liberality has so greatly increased the educational advantages of the "Old North State." This contribution increases the endowment fund of Wake Forest College to $164,000.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE, Dec. 16.
In reply to your telegram of December 16, I beg leave to submit the following letter which tells its own story:

New York, Dec. 16, 1886.
President Charles E. Taylor, Wake Forest College, N. C.

Dear Sir—I take much pleasure in sending you by express fifty first mortgage R. R. bonds ($1,000 each) numbered from 289 to 338 inclusive ($50,000). They are coupon bonds, bear six per cent, and run for thirty years. I have registered them in your corporate name with the American Loan and Trust Company, which is the trustee for the property. The income shall only be used in the payment of salaries or current expenses, and not for buildings or fixtures.

If you desire, you may call it the Bostwick Endowment Fund. I trust that this may encourage you in your work and be blessed in helping to accomplish grand results in the future.

Yours very truly,
J. A. BOSTWICK.

I believe that many hearts will be made glad by this letter and that thousands of your readers will sympathize with us in our gratitude to Mr. Bostwick for what is, I believe, the largest gift ever received in the State from without, for education among the white people. And such a token of kindly regard and willingness to help us in building up the South will go very far toward cementing the fraternal relations, now so happily restored, between the once alienated sections.

Very truly, etc.,
CHAR. E. TAYLOR.

Greatly Excited.
Not a few of the citizens of New Berne, N. C., have recently become excited over the astounding facts, that several of their friends who had been pronounced by their physicians as incurable and beyond all hope—suffering with that dreadful monster Consumption—have been completely cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, the only remedy that does positively cure all throat and lung diseases, Coughs, Colic, Asthma and Bronchitis.
