Found at Last.

M. A. Abbey, of Russellville, Ark dated June 8th, 1884: "At last I have found an honest remedy.

Senator Leland Stanford, the California millionaire, introduced in the United States Senate last week a bill to assist working people to form co-operative working associations.

"My bill is to provide for the co-operation of people with or without money. It will enable them to put in their labor if they have nothing else, or property or money if they have it."

"How does it differ from the present laws regulating the formation of corporations?" "It requires no money—no paid-up capital."

"Then your bill will allow men to incorporate without capital?" "Don't use the word incorporate or corporation. It is a misnomer."

"I know of no laws allowing it. This pushes aside the restrictions of the present laws?" "Why would not partnership do as well?"

"Because when a man dies or retires the partnership is dissolved. An associated body under this law would have a perpetual life—men could go out or come in without disturbing it."

"Have you conferred with any of the labor advocates in regard to it?" "No; it is purely my own notion. I thought a great deal about it last year, and intended then to introduce it, but let it lie over."
