and contested election cases the people of New Berne must not forget and neglect their educational interest. In 1882 the old town had a boom in this line which resulted in the erection of a handsome building and the maintenance of a school with four to five hun-dred pupils for four years. The deolsion of the courts in regard to the constitutionality of acts by which taxes were levied for the support of graded schools was a severe blow to our school, but still our people are yet alive to their educational interest and continue to keep alive the spirit of progress and

In the midst of political excitement

We are not so united as a few years ago, and we feat there are not so many children attending school, but there is a hope that the General Assembly may do something by which the doors of our elegant building and academy rounds may again be thrown open to those who are unable to command the price of entrance.

From the best information we can obtain there are now in the city about 875 children enrolled in the various schools. When the doors of the graded school were opened to all there were over 500. The cost then was about $5,500 per annum; the cost now, of all the schools, is about $5,000; but little difference in the cost; considerable difference in the number of children attending; and we fear the non attendance of a large number of children is on account of their inability to pay the tuition fees

Our graded school as now organized has never had a better corps of teachers personal debate of the session. Websince its first organization. The teachers of the primary grades, Mrs. Ferrebee and Miss Brookfield, have been with the school from the beginning and are doing just as efficient work as ever; the intermediate grades are taught by Misses Oliver, Allen and Hollister, very efficient teachers in every respect, while the higher grades are taught by Mr. James Thomas and Professor Neal, the superintendent, both first class scholars and teachers. In addition to this Miss Hannah Atlen renders assistance in the broad smile in the House as soon as the bill appropriates $400,000 for the intermediate grades and gives lessons resolutions were read and everybody in book-keeping, a very important feature in the school. The only thing the school lacks is the means to employ more teachers and let the doors be thrown open to all. Every child in the community ought to have the advantages of such education as is given there, and we hope the time is not far distant when the Academy Green will again have its five hundred children. In the meantime, those who have children to send to school and want good service and cheap tuition cannot do better than send them to the New Berne the roll. Mr. Brogden rose and combetter than send them to the New Berne graded school.
