As indication of the increase in the lumber business a new saw mill is reported as going up every week or two somewhere in this section. Along the A. & N. C. Road, between this city and Kinston, there are several mills, and a new one has recently been put in by Mr. John W. Moody, near Dover, an energetic man who is cutting some fine lumber for both local demand and shipping purposes. He is also running a store in connection with his mill.

History Getting Muddled.

We notice several of our exchanges indulging in a little gush of noble senti ments on the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox One makes an error in the date, having it April 10; whereas, it occurred on the 9th. But another gets way off the line, and places the number of Confederates at forty thousand, when in fact it was less than ten thousand who were surrendered that memorable day. further says that General Lee surrendered his sword as commander and chief of the Southern armies to General Grant, whereas it is well known that General Lee surrendered only the forces under his immediate command; otherwise the battle of Bentonsville would not have been fought, nor would Durham and Greensboro become noted as the headquarters of General Sherman and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston during the negotiations for the surrender of the forces under the command of the latter chieftain. The JOURNAL in what it said we believe had everything right except spelling Appomattox with but one "t."

Cotton In Checks Again. We publish today a communication direct from Mr. C. B. Ferrell, Montgomery, Alas, in reply to Dr. J. W. Sanders. In this Mr. Ferrell gives the exact amount of manure used, and in his letter to Rev. Mr. Sanderlin he gives particulars as to the manner of prepar-The steamer Trent will leave Polloks- ing his land, manuring planting and ville tomorrow for this city to bring cultivating. We have no right to disdown the incorporators and friends of credit his report. We believe it is true. We can hardly expect such results in North Carolina from cotton because our olimate is not so favorable for the growing of this crop as that of Alabama and Georgia. But, that a great improvement can be made in the manper of manuring and cultivating cannot be denied. It is less expensive to make ten bales of cotton on five acres than to make five bales on ten or fifteen acres. We commend Mr. Ferrell's plans to the farmers of this section. If followed, bearing in mind, as the News and Observer suggests, the difference in climate, on account of which less distance between the checks will be required in North Carolina, we are sure our farmers will not regret the experiment.

Mr. A. At three o'clock in the afternoon of Sunday, April 4th 1887, the funeral of Burgwyn M. Gates took place from the Baptist Church on Middle street in this streets leading to the church already city. The first sound of the bell which called the solemn assembly, found the thronged with people from every direc tion, wending their way to pay the last sad tribute of love and respect to one who in the midst of a busy and useful life had been called from the cares of this world to the joyful rest of the world beyond. The Sunday-school of which he was the superintedent, and had been for years, numbering over two hundred and fifty children, were soon in place, as was also the congregation of which he had long been one of the most regular and punctual attendants upon all of its services. To these were added the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school, officers, teachers and children in a body, numbering nearly three hundred persons. Then came the solemn procession, with measured step, from the house of the deceased, under the direction of Mr. J. A. Simpson undertaker, with John C. Whitty, J. V. Williams, Dr. J. D. Clark, Joseph H. Holland, C. S. Hollister, J. M. Howard, F. W. Hancock, and Dr. Geo, Slover, underbearers. The lodge of the Royal Arcanum led the march in advance of the searse, which was closely followed by a line of carriages, containing the be reaved wife, parents and immediate relatives of the departed, in the rear of which a long column of friends and

Notable among them was a large pillow Superintendent, a lovely sheaf of inscription "Our Friend," in immet telles, from Mr. Alexander M. Baker an anchor-the emblem of hope-hand somely formed of white and vellow immortelles from Mr. John R. B. Carraway; solovely white and green cross of natural flowers from Dr. John D. Clark; a magnificent cluster of calla lilies tied with white ribbon from Mrs. Dr. Theodore Whitfield; a rich cluster of white verbenas and callas from Mr William B. Boyd; a beautiful and fra grant boquet of hyacinths from Miss O'Neil; a boquet of beautiful and rare hot-house flowers from Mr. Benjamin Jones; a magnificent boquet, both in arrangement and variety, of natural flowers from Mrs. Charles E. Slover; a lovely collection of rich and rare flowers from Mrs. Joseph Nelson and also from Mrs. C. E. Foy; an immense collection of floral gifts from the relatives and friends of the deceased, who were aware of the great attachment he had for and the interest he always took in the cultivation of flowers.

The impressive services at the church were conducted by Rev. Dr. Theodore Whitfield, pastor of the deceased, assisted by Rev. L. W. Crawford of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The music was in accord with the surrounding circumstances and of sublime solemnity. Every available seat in the vast edifice was occupied and large numbers were standing in the aisles and vestibule while still others were gathered around the entrances even out into the street The little sparrows which nestle in great profusion in the ivy which chings so gracefully to the building, seemed to intuitively understand that there was something unusual transpiring within the sacred walls and were interested spectators of the mournful column as it moved off from the church towards the cemetery. The funeral procession was undoubtedly the largest that has ever been in this city.

It was a bright sunny day such as the month of April gives, and the whole community was moved as by one impulse to join in the solemn cortege.

The services were concluded at the grave, and when the remains had been committed to the ground to await the great morning of the resurrection. when the earth and sea shall give up their dead, the floral offerings were placed over them, and seemed to say to the sorrowing hearts, in the language of our Saviour at Bethany, "thy brother shall rise again." In the sweet serenity of the Sabbath evening were con-cluded the last solemn rites of the christian church to one who by a life of devotion to christian duty, a consistent walk and godly conversation, had attained an eminent claim to all the rich promises of the christian faith.
