SUPERIOR COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Trial of Charles F. Jones for the Murder of his Wife, Tempa S. Jones.

SECOND DAY

The prisoner was brought in, looking somewhat dejected and much more interested than on the first day.

The defence offered no evidence resting the case on that already introduced for the State.

THE BARY IN COURT.

The little child who was claimed to have made the perilous passage across the river the day of its mother's death was regularly in attendance during the week, in the arms of its grandmother. It frequently reminded the vast assembly of its presence either by its isnocent prattle or wail of discontent at she unusual surroundings to which it was subjected

His Ronor recalled Pearce Ransom and questioned him in reference to the identity of the bost taken by Jones on the day of the death.

Defence moved that the prosecution be confined to one of the two counts in the indictment, which was not granted by the court, and exceptions taken by defence.

THE ABOUNDED FOR THE DEPENCE was opened by P. H. Pelletier, Esq. who, in the course of his remarks, declared that the whole case rested on circumstantial evidence, and quoted the rules governing such evidence, benefit of any reasonable doubt that as to allege that money will buy impure the minds of the jury. He ran over the evidence and argued that the this vicinity has been considerable, and circumstances as detailed before the reports from Pamilico say that it has jury by witnesses made a case of pre-been very heavy there. It is hoped meditated murder, as charged in the meditated murder, as charged in the indictment. He joined the evidence dry June is so necessary for a good cot- together in an ingenius manner and enforced it with a high degree of earnest-

The argument for the defense was esumed by W. W. Clark, Esq. Mr. Clark opened with the assurance to the jury that what he might say in behalf of the prisoner would be the last words submitted to them by any one for him, and he felt the responsibility the greater. For himself and the jury he invoked the direction of God Almighty who alone tlemen have made an able defence of was able to guide them to a correct conclusion. Mr. Clark with much ingenmorning for Washington, D. C., on a uity raised the hypotheses of murder in recreative visit to relatives. He will the second degree; or willful drowning by the deceased, who after crossing the river and going up to the untenanted house, had resolved to go no further and course ensued and he may have unin-beniforally choked her to death. These hypothesee, it was ably contended were more murder set up by the prosecution.

Ris Honor then charged the jury in clear and comprehensive terms, recapitulating with great carefulness the evidence in the case which was for the benefit of the jury. The evidence, His Honor stated, made either a case of murder or nothing. The jury took the case at about 2 o'clock, and the court took a recess until 8.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 3 o'clock His Honor took his seat. Case 56, State vs. Cyrus Westbrook and Dempsey Bell, was called and set for trial this morning at nine o'clock.

THE CLOSING SCENES OF THE JONES TRIAL. Just as the hands upon the dial of the great clock in the court room pointed at 3:15 the door leading from the jury room swung open and the solemn procession of jurous filed into the boxes. A breathless silence prevailed while the clerk called the roll. "Gentlemen of the jury," said he "have you found a verdict" "We have, " said the spokes-man, Mr. F. Bosser. "What do you find ?" "Guilty," said the spokesman The roll was again called, when each

Mr. Jas. A. Bryan, chairman of the board of county commissioners, explained that the reason of this was that the treasurer of the county had received no funds from the tax collector, the collector having paid them over to the late treasurer. But that arrangements would be made to pay the witnesses and jurors.

The Legal Profession Defended

It is frequently charged that the defence of any one in court depends upon legal talent. This we all know is unreviewed and an earnest appeal made true, but what we do wish to say is that in the case of Chas. F. Jones at this term of the court no such allegation entered for the channel race which will hold good.

Jones was poor, unable to employ counsel, and His Honor Judge Shipp was careful in assigning counsel and gave as good as the baf afforded. Messrs. Simmons, Moore, Clark and Pelletier.

Of course these gentlemen would not shrink from the task, and in the short time for the preparation of the case, we think put up the best defense we have jury, showed tact and skill, while in the examining of witnesses Mr. Simmons showed more than his usual good judgment and skill. The arguments by Messre. Clark and Pelletier were of the highest order. Mr. Pelletier did himself credit in the minds of all who listened to him, while the effort of Mr. Clark was truly an able one, replete sis, enforced with all the powers of logic. In defending Jones these gentheir chosen profession.
