NORTH CAROLINA POLITICAL LEADERS

What Mr. Jonathan Haynes Thinks About Them.

While making our daily perambulations in the city of New Berne, we were invited to step in the office of Mr. Frank Myers, where we found Mr. Jonathan Haynes engaged in writing. He invited us to be seated, which we did, and as the weather was unpleasantly hot, and the office dimly lighted, we concluded to prolong our visit and entered into a conversation about the political state of the State, and the prospects of a good fall trade, and finally drifted into a discussion regarding the intellectual merits of our leading politicians. Mr. Haynes stated that he thought North Carolina had every reason to be proud of her political leaders, that he could not mention the name of one who was not well fitted for political leadership. We asked him what he thought of Senator Vance, he replied in words as near as we can remember, as follows:

"I think Senator Vance is the most extraordinary man that has been born and reared in North Carolina in my day and generation. When he first entered political life I was a resident of another State, and knew but little of him. After my return to North Carolina I heard much of him. In conversation with the late genial, whole-souled and talented Major Thomas Sparrow of Washington, this State, he told me that Zeb Vance as he called him, was the greatest man of his age in the State, that he was intellectually a giant, and would eventually be the leading man of the State and rank with the great men of the United States. Sparrow thought he never spoke of him if any one was slow in bestowing praise, unless praise was due. I asked Sparrow in what quality of mind did Mr. Vance so much excel, his reply was 'He seems to me that he excels in everything, whether at the bar or on the stump or in legislative halls, he is a graceful and forcible writer and an elegant conversationalist.' This conversation never passed entirely from my mind, I have often thought of it, and once since reminded Sparrow of it. He said 'Haven't my prophecies turned out true, and let me tell you, Haynes, that it need not seem to predict Vance's great future, and the end is not yet.' When the war clouds that had so long hovered over the South burst forth in their fury, then Vance loomed up to the eyes of the people of North Carolina, and I fully realized all that Sparrow had said of him. He seems to me to be instinctively a leader. Parton in his life of General Jackson says that he, Jackson, was a born leader of men, that if a company of emigrants was suddenly attacked by Indians, and Jackson was among them, that he would instantly assume the command and would be readily obeyed. Vance appears to me to be just such a man, during the war while occupying the then very undesirable position of Governor of the State, his eyes were turned to him, and the army looked to him, and fully and implicitly trusted him and nobly did he respond, our troops were better clothed and better fed than those of any Southern State. He has so thoroughly identified himself with the entire State, that though a western man, he seems to me to belong to Craven county, and his name is a household word throughout the length and breadth of the State. No man since the days of the great Gaston, has occupied as great a share of public attention, not only in his own State but also in other States, and none whom the people so delight to honor. He has been accused of a great fondness for the office of United States Senator. I should think he was, who would not be? I, myself, would like to be a United States Senator, and there is a quarter of a million of men in North Carolina just like me, and let me tell you that Vance has no successor as Senator until removed by death. Politicians and wire pullers may lay their plans to get a successor for him. To these we say in the language of the poet Burns,

The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley.

I cannot say that I have any acquaintance with Senator Vance; I saw him the first time at Tarboro during the war, and was introduced to him by Mr. Churchill Perkins of Pitt county; from that day to this I have never been in his presence, but I have followed him since then through his entire political life, and I would not have him undo or unsay anything, politically speaking, that he has done or said. All I regret in his whole career is, that he was not a Democrat earlier in life, but I can overlook that, as he is now as good a Democrat as any man in the State."

This was about the sum and substance of Mr. Haynes's comments upon Senator

Vance. His remarks, naturally and we fully believe that he is one of the best millionaires in the State. We asked him if he would not give us his opinion of Gov. Tom Jarvis. His reply was, that he would not do so, but that he fully believed that Jarvis was the coming man of the State, and that we now expect to see him in an important position.

STATE NEWS

obtained from Our Exchanges.

Greenstone News. Thirty-five car loads of southern iron ore passed through the city of Greensboro going to Detroit points.

Shelby News. Several of the machinery has been placed in the new cotton factory. It is now almost certain that another steam cotton mill will be erected in Shelby.

Murphy Bulletin. There is a capitalist here who is looking out a building site for a $25,000 summer resort hotel. The probabilities are that the hotel will be erected at the Ashley mineral springs, six miles southwest of the city of Murphy, N. C. R. R.

Durham Reporter. Yesterday evening a farmer living near Melbane, Alamance county, was returning home from Durham, and when about three miles from town the evening mail train passed him. His horse was so badly frightened that it began to buck and then fell back.

Willapa Signal. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Violet Williams, also noted, charging her with stealing from him one dollar and seventy-five cents in money. The case was heard yesterday before Justice Miles, when, there being no evidence to show that the woman had stolen the money she was discharged, and in default of payment of the costs in the case Jones, the prosecutor, was sent to jail.

Charlotte Chronicle. The excavation for the new building of the Young Men's Christian Association on Tryon street is progressing and a considerable hole has been dug out. It is of the largest single excavations ever made in the city. The plans for the new building are in the hands of the contractors for the purpose of making estimates. It will be by far the handsomest building in Charlotte. It will cost between $150,000 and $175,000.

Sylvia Herald. When a railroad reaches a country for the first time, it very naturally attracts a great deal of attention, and as a matter of course, is the prime cause of many ludicrous scenes and incidents. A short time ago a youth came down to Sylvia, for the first time since the railroad reached the county. Amongst other things, he discovered on the side of a freight car, the word "Capacity" 10,000 lbs., which he read "100,000 lbs." at the same time ejaculating "By God! boys, that thing is a long way from home—ain't she?"

Sanford Express. Beside that tend the cotton factory meeting next Saturday afternoon and take stock. You want to invest your money where it will pay you and your country. You want to have the advantages and convenience of a town with its society, its churches, its schools and the arts of civilization. It takes a town to make a progressive country people. Factories here, is a town here and don't you forget it. A town here is a market for the country. A cotton factory will do more to build this place as a town, than perhaps anything else. Every man who reads this, who knows the nature of the subject and who has money, would do well to attend the meeting.

DIED.

Of inflammation of the bowels, at his home on the north side of Neuse river, Craven county, Charles Toler.

He leaves a wife and six children, one of whom resides in Miss. He seemed to be conscious almost up to the very moment he died. A good man has died—a worthy Christian has gone home. Mr. Toler lived to see all of his children grown and married, and to reach the ripe old age of seventy-two years the 10th day of this month. He was a true neighbor, an affectionate husband. He had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church for a great many years. We mourn the heavy loss, but our loss is his gain. He has left this world of misery, trouble and affliction, and is now enjoying the sunny clime of everlasting bliss.

Oh! that hope the Christian has, When death approaches nigh, He falls asleep in Jesus' arms, And rests with Him on high.

Every COUNTRY MERCHANT should buy OLD RIP TOBACCO.

Recently Examined. Not a few of the citizens of New Berne, N. C., have recently become greatly excited over the astounding facts, that several of those friends who had been pronounced by their physicians as incurable and they did not believe that they would ever be cured by Dr. King's New Discovery of Consumptive Cures, they however had done positively, and finally at an advanced age, they are now enjoying the best of health.

Interstate Commerce Decision. WASHINGTON, July 26. The Interstate Commerce Commission has rendered a decision in the case of the Traveler and Travelers' Union against the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company. The case involved the fulfillment of a contract for the free transportation of baggage with the exception of the United States mails, and the excess of the amount of baggage and the other travelers. The commission has pronounced its decision in the case that involves any question of unjust discrimination or extortion of any other matter of which we have any jurisdiction. If petitioners have contracts or business arrangements with defendants or others by which large numbers of their certificates are not standing in the hands of holders, there are courts provided by law having jurisdiction to hear and determine controversies of that character. The power to enforce contracts is not one which has been confided to us. Nor have we any general power or authority to manage the business of carriers, but only a limited power expressly defined by the statute, to interfere to prevent wrong and oppression in specified cases. Every ground of our jurisdiction as defined by the statute, relates directly or indirectly to the transportation of persons and freight by railroad, canal and reasonable rates and without unjust discrimination or extortion of any other matter of which we have any jurisdiction.
