The New Baltimore and Ohio Deal.

It is announced that "a preliminary contract" has been entered into between the Baltimore and Ohio Company and a syndicate of English and American bankers to supply the company with $10,000,000 to pay off a floating indeht-edness of $7,000,000 and for other purcompany's affairs shall be managed hereafter in a way they can approve. do so. Their large investment in B. and O. securities will naturally tend to make them desire to promote its prosperity. In this labor they may expect the co-operation of others, not members of the syndicate, whose holdings of stocks and bonds of the road lead them John Wainright, Wilmington, Del.; to favor the same end. Baltimore and and O. properties, which interests will need to be considered, the sacrifices of the city and State in behalf of the company entitling them to large influence upon its policy. The large commercial interest our people have in its success will cause them to favor any change of management that will make it a more efficient aid in the development of Baltimore trade. It is hardly conceivable that the interests of the syndicate would lead to the suppression of the advantage In rates which Baltimore's geographical position has given her. To prevent irwise, will be a strong point gained. Our people would expect that in the common two hundred pupils het year.
