THE THISTLE AND THE VOLUN-

The Thistle comes across the foam To take our precious cup away
The trophy with her must go home—
That's what the British yachtmen say.

She is a boat of wondrous speed, And like a swallow skims the seas In lightest airs, and has no need To wait till blows a "outter breeze."

Well, people have a right to boast
About their own, for speech is free;
But 'tis not those who brag the most
As Scotchmen know, who 'bear the

The Thistie is a bonnie boat But shortly 'twill appear That we have put a yaoht afloat To match her in the Volunteer.

Hail Volunteer! Auspicious name In enterprise on land and sea! Though thou hast yet to win thy fame Of thy success no doubts have we.

The cup shall never cross the sea. The hearts of Englishmen to cheer, While to defend the trophy we Have left a Yankee "Volunteer." -Boston Courier.

A NEW JOKE ON VANCE.

Gen. J. M. Leach spends con-siderable of his time in Washington with his son, J. M. Leach, Jr., who is a chief of division in the Sixth Auditor's office. The General is as full of "reminiscences" and good stories as even and, one which I heard him relate to a party of North Carolinians the other evening will bear repeating. Said he, in effect:

'You know that Zeb Vance used to be a member of the National House before the war, and Sion Rogers represented the Raleigh district in Congress. Well, some friends sent Frank Shober, of Salisbury, and me a case of very fine wine one day. Zeb and Sion found it out, somehow, and they used to come around to see us mighty often. In fact, they became great friends of ours, sticking closer than broth ers-while the wine lasted.

"One night, after they had relieved us of a half dozen bottles, more or less, they got to feeling pretty good, and after a while, Zeb remarked that he believed he was just about the best dancer that North Carolina ever sent to Con-

"Now, nobody ever heard of Zeb Vance's virtues as a dancer before. Every one knows that he dosen't in the least resemble a ballet girl. He ain't built right to dance and I didn't believe he had ever had any experience in that direction before that night; but he stuck to his as "Well, Zeb kept repeating the statement until finally Sion says: 'Zeb, I don't count myself any great shakes as a practical exponent of the terpsichorean art, but I allow that I can just dance the hind legs off of you.

"Now, Sion Rogers was Luilt like a bean-pole; he was over six feet high and as thin as a wafer, and no living man ever saw him without a big pair of eye glasses adjusted to his long nose. If it was funny to think of Zeb Vance's dancing, it was simply ridiculous to consider Sion Rogers in that connection. But Sheber said he believed Sion could down Zeb; I asserted to the contrary, and Shober bet me $100.

The room was cleared, Zeb and Sion poeled off their wearing ap-narel until nothing was left but nocturnal habiliments, and the two contestants took their positions on the floor. It was an ill asserted pair-never were two men more untike. Shober and I were to do the patting and Zeb and Sion were told that the man who stayed on the floor longest was to have a half dozen bottles of our wine. Shober started the old plantation pat; the dancers caught step and went at it.

"Go it, Sion! shouted Shober.

"Buckle down to it Zeb!' I exclaimed, and both men began to rattle off a double shuffle back step that would have turned any nigger in North Carolina green with envy. "Time passed.

"Midnight came and went; the "Midnight came and went; the clock on the mantel struck one. The dancingstill went on.

"Daylight appeared. Vance was beginning to deable like a hinch-back and he was sweating like a draft horse. Sidn seemed to grow taller every minute; his head was thrown back, his arms stood akimbo, only his foer appeared to touch the fioot, and not a drop of perspiration was visible about him.

"The lotel breakfast-bell rang. Shobet and I were nearly exhausted although we took turns in patting; but the datcing still went on. Zeb's shirt was sticking to him like a huge court-plaster, but Sion looked as cool as a Christmas snow atorm. Zeb was bent ever until he had nearly assumed a sitting poeting, his bow legs looking at found as a barrel hoop. Sion commed to grow taller and his eye glasses still perserved their equilibrium on the and of his none.

"When EP collect came, and Con."

galed themselves with our wine, and Zeb went to bed. But Sion didn't. After dancing 16 hours without a stop, he went to the House of Representatives and made a big speech.

I remember Congressman Rogers, although I was a small boy when he died. He again represented the Raleigh district in Congress for one or two terms just after the war, and a very able man and a most fluent and eloquent speaker he was.

But he is dead now and buried near Raleigh. And there he lies—as you and I, dear reader, will some day somewhere lie-
