GREEN MANURING

NUMBER 15.

Conversations held with two farmers today will be more interesting than anything that I can write. The object duce farmers to make efforts for greater prosperity.

Farmer B. said that he had not yet been able to pay his store bills for sup-plies, furnished him by one of his neighbors (a merchant) to make his instance, J. I. Vause and L. H. Outlaw cotton crop, and that his crop was so attempted to cross the river in a small short, that he feared he could not realize boat. While among the small trees in enough from his cotton to pay for his year's provision bill. He stated that he less a deserved compliment.

Our regular contributor on "Green Manuring," beings out a plain and practical article in this issue. Though he has left the subject, he could not have taken a better one. It relates facts that, we are sorry to say, exist to too great an extent and must be changed for the good of the country.

Important to seven out of every ten pooff.—The moment constipation begins, that moment the blood begins to be impure and poor, and the system to demand the use of Laxador.

He had been compelled for several years to be up all of his meat, that he had no provisions for next year. He spoke sadly, and looked discouraged as well, be might be, for when a farmer is compelled to buy his provisions, he is usually on the road to poverty. He said that he had used all kinds of remedies, but his hogs continued to die, and that nearly all had died. I asked what he thought of the green manuring articles, and the plan of preventing cholera that had appeared in the Journal of the green manuring articles, and the plan of preventing cholera that had appeared in the Journal of the green manuring articles, and the papers and had not read the articles.
