"Antiquities" at the Fair.

among the articles on exhibition at the Fish, Game and Oyster Fair lately held in our city were what were by common consent called the "Antiquities." Some account of them, though it be barely an enumeration, and necessarily imper-fect and incomplete, may not be amiss

One of the most ancient of these "antiquities," and one of special interest to bibliophiles, was a copy of Baxter's "Saint's Rest," published in 1647, during the Protectorate of Cromwell, and about ten years after the book was written. It is now a restrict to the statement of these "an intured by his grand daughter, Mrs. Hugh Lovick, and a third from the battlefield of New Berne, whose owner having engagements elsewhere probably forgot to return to claim his property.

Mrs. Radcliff exhibited three odd old written. It is now owned by Miss Sarah Wilson.

The title is suggestive. In those days saints of any kind got very little rest of holy water. Then there was a large and any sort. According as each was in power, saints of any particular belief made things as uncomfortable as possible for saints of all other beliefs. A use it not to "go home till morning," companion book to this was a very old while Rev. Dr. Vass and Dr. Charles companion book to this was a very old Bible, belonging to Mrs. Davis, in

'Sheol'' finds no place. Contemporary with these may have been the spinet, shown by Mrs. Bynum, for this instrument and the harpsicord whichlit preceded, are the lineal ancestors of the piano forte; and as the latter came into use toward the end of the 18th century, its grandmother, the spinet, dates back very much farther.

Rev. Dr. Vass exhibited the diploma of membership of the "Society of the Cincinnati" of Col. Abraham Maury, his grandfather, and also a fine portrait in eil of the same veteran of the Revolution. The diploma bears the signature of Gen. Washington-he of little hatchet fame-who was at that time President of the Virginia Society as well as President-General of the whole associa-

There were State societies in Chief Justice that has filled the position the original thirteen States, and in seven North Carolina Chapter passed, away, leaving but little record of its actions the Cincinnati in this State.

Dr. Vass sent also a bound volume of 'The Gazette,' the first newspaper grees and a seat on the Supreme bench published in New Berne. It was printof the United States. Another New Berne newspaper, bearing the date of March 18, 1788, was exhibited by Mrs. Basil Manly. A subject of interest at that time was the proposed adoption by this State of the Constitution of the United States, which was rejected by the convention at Hillsboro in the property of Mrs. Eliza H. Knox last at Christ's and St. Paul's churches July, 1788, but was afterwards adopted and companions appropriate for it

A quilt, the skillful handiwork of Mrs. Speight, and a cane cut on the the Revolution, and in 1792 Governor of the State, were contributed by their great-granddaughters Mrs. M. S. Nelson and Mrs. Jas. A. Bryan.

Another cane made from the jaw bone Another cane made from the jaw bone of a whale was on exhibition, which, if it he any indication of the size of the swallowing apparatus of that cetacean, leaves no room for doubt that he could have taken in Jonah and several of his have taken in Jonah and several of his family without inconvenience. Mrs. Bryan sent also a lock of Washington's hair, one too of the unfortunate Empress Josephine, and a bon-bon box that formerly belonged to the Empress Eugenie, whom some persons think was another unfortunate, and Mrs. Nelson completed what may be called the "Napoleon Exhibit" with a handsome glove of Admiral Lord Nelson. This ministox, brought from Constantinople by ture, owned by Samuel Duffy, Esq., Cardinal Bonaparte, great nephew of the first Emperor of that name, as a present to the Princess Murat. Several pictures done in needlework, with colors well preserved, though very old, belonging to Miss Taylor, Mrs. F.C. Roberts and Miss Hannah Clark, attracted much attention. In appearance they were not unlike the famous Goblin tapeatry, and might have been mistracted much attention. In appearance they were not unlike the famous Goblin tapeatry, and might have been meltaken for paintings; and of them a worthy companion was a linen valance, exhibited by Mrs. L. A. Ives, spun, woven and embroidered 150 years ago with exquisite taste and skill.

There were cut glass pitchers and a bowl, brought from England a century ago, as fresh and clean cut as if just from the factory, and like history, finding themselves repeated in the etyles of today. Mammoth toddy glasses—probably stirrup or Dook and Dorvach cups—by Mrs. John Dunn and Mrs. John Hughes, which, if they indicate the capacity of our forefathers for toddy, induce the belief that in their day, at least, probablion was not popular. Several quaint old chairs exhibited by Missas Bryan and Hughes, were designed and proposed and an unequaled capacity for torture, as the writer can feelingly testify.

There were samplers innumer able but comfortable, and quilts "till you can't rest '-an unusual association with quilts, while a wheel, shown by Miss Laura Hughes, told how flax was spun is the long ago, but the writer could find no specimens of work done on the wheel by the fair exhibiter.

An old silver spoon that belonged to Mr. Peter Carraway is said to have been the ferriage paid by a British officer for crossing the river Trent. In those Revolutionary days this chieftain to the Highlands bound was probably in as sore straits as he who ran away with Lord Ullin's daughter, and doubtless offered a reward something similar to that promised to the "hardy Highland hight:

. . . Boatman do not tarry,

And I'll gie thee a silver spoot To row me over the ferry.

Another British officer figured in a miniature, and yet a third, and no less s person than my Lord Cornwallis, in a pincushion. Probably it would be more correct to say that it was a piece of one of my Lord's coats that so figured. Did he leave this scrap in his hasty march along the road cut by his troops in Lenoir and Craven counties-even yet known to some as the "British Road"— when going from Wilmington to his doom at Yorktown? The pincushion is pers, by Mrs. Bangert, worn by Miriam Emerson in 1797. A powder horn attracted much atten tion in these days of breech loaders. It was made in 1767 by the well known "Lo, the poor Indian!" A very handsome meerschaum pipe on exhibition by Mr. Cohen, now of our city, proved that the aforesaid Lo's tribe was not the only one that smoked the pipe of peace. for this pipe-has been used by the Cohen family on festival occasions for five generations.

Many old fashioned miniatures of persons well known in this community were exhibited: Mesers. Isaac Tull, R Torrance, John P. Daves, Mr. and Mrs R. S. Blackledge, Capt. Wm. W. Roberts, James McKinlay, Major John Dayes of the North Carolina Conti nentals and first Collector of the port of New Berne under President Washington, and others. Some of these were nainted by the ramous artist Sully and the work was beautifully done. But occupied by Mr. George Ash on Middle street, was being dug. How did it get there? It is almost perfectly preserved in spite of its long burial. Near this was a pile of what were apparently decrepit bank notes, which were said not to be "worth a Continental." This must have been a mistake for they were Continental money.
