

THE DAILY JOURNAL

VOL. VII.-NO. 36.

NEW BERNE, N. C., SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1888.

PRICE 5 CENTS.

LOCAL NEWS.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

SALAD OIL. Capers, Curry Powders, Tapioca, Corn Starch, Flavoring Extracts, Choice Teas for making Iced Tea. C. E. SLOVER.

SAY, HUSBAND, have you seen that tremendous crowd of customers at Rackburn's, The Grocer? Well, the cause of it is, they are getting nicer goods for the same money than at any other Grocery Store in the city, and you know that it is what the people want. I declare I have not failed on my bread a single time since I have been getting that nice flour of his at only 3¢ per lb. and that Butter is always sweet and nice and is perfectly delicious on those hot rolls.

This conversation is correct, that is just what I am doing. If you don't think so, come and try. Money refunded if goods not found as represented. To the smokers I will say that I have 25 cases more Tar Heel at 40¢ per lb. in any quantity. Also the best 2 for 5¢ Cigar in the world. may 5

ICE CREAM at Sarah Oxley's cream parlors on Broad near Middle streets. Families supplied at reasonable rates. may 5

PICNIC HAMS, Picnic Baskets, Picnic Buckets, Picnic Cakes and Crackers for sale at the only cash store in North Carolina. Humphrey & Howard's old stand.

ICE for sale at R. C. Baker's, Broad street, at 1¢ per pound. Open Sunday from 7 to 8:30 a. m., and from 12:30 to 6 p. m.

ARRETT'S Medoc Vineyard Cognac and Wines for sale, at Manufacturer's prices. by JAMES REDMOND.

CHOICE N. C. Hams at 12¢ cents per pound at A. MILLER'S.

PURE Liquors and Wines for Medical and other uses, at wholesale, JAMES REDMOND.

BAY MULE for sale by GEO. ALLEN & CO.

REDMOND'S Ginger Ale, Lemon Soda, etc., equal to imported. JAMES REDMOND.

50 Tons Ammoniated Fertilizer, GEO. ALLEN & CO.

DIRECT importation of French Brandy and Holland Gin arrived in bond and duties paid at Custom House in New Berne, guaranteeing genuine goods for sale. JAS. REDMOND.

The new city marshal made an arrest in less than an hour after being sworn in.

Our Washington correspondent speaks in very complimentary terms of our Representative, Simmons.

Rev. Dr. C. F. Deems delivers the annual address at the commencement of Livingston College, Salisbury, on May 16th.

The steamer Howard continues to bring in stray lots of cotton from up Trent river. Twelve bales were brought in yesterday.

The delegates to the county convention will do well to read the communication headed "Misrepresentation" on our editorial page today.

The Democratic county convention convenes today at 12 o'clock for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State and Congressional conventions.

General Ransom's admirable address on the battle of Fredericksburg will be published in Sunday and Tuesday's issues of our Daily and in the Weekly edition of next week.

Immense fires were raging in White Oak pocom in Onslow and Jones before the recent rains. Parties from Onslow say that a deer was found burned to death in the conflagration.

The flower thieves are still at work. On Thursday night two beautiful geraniums were stolen from the garden of Mrs. B. B. Davenport. The sufferers of these depredations ought to offer a reward for the pilferers.

Mr. Wm. Hay, one of our oldest and most highly esteemed citizens and for many years an official member of the Methodist Church, died at his residence in this city yesterday at 12 o'clock in the 71st year of his age. A good and useful man has gone to his reward.

Funeral Notice. The funeral of Mr. William Hay will take place from the Methodist church at five o'clock this afternoon. The friends of the family and the public are invited to be present.

Steamer Movements. The steamer of the E. C. D. line sailed yesterday afternoon with a cargo of cotton, lumber, naval stores and truck. The Eagle of this line will arrive today.

Personal. Mrs. W. F. Rountree and children and Mrs. J. R. B. Carraway have returned from a visit to Lenoir and Pitt.

Mrs. Ida Kinsey and children went up to Cobton yesterday on the steamer Kinston.

Capt. Matt. Manly, E. W. Smallwood and others of our citizens who attended the unveiling of the Confederate monument at Washington, have returned. Capt. Manly was assistant marshal.

U. S. Commissioner's Court

Jacob Edwards of Vandemere, Pamlico county, was before U. S. Commissioner W. W. Clark yesterday upon the charge of selling whiskey without license. The warrant was issued upon the application of James W. Moore, deputy collector of internal revenue. L. J. Moore Esq. appeared for the defendant.

After hearing the testimony the defendant was bound over in a bond of $250 for his appearance at the next term of the district court.

A New Berne Vendor

The Durham Tobacco Plant gives an account of an entertainment given at "The School of Music" in that city on Monday night last from which we clip the following paragraph:

Mr. C. S. Bryan sang "Tell Her I Love Her" wonderfully. His voice was as clear as a bell and sweet smooth, caustic. It is a pleasure to hear him sing "Home Sweet Home" later in the evening and rendered it well. His falsetto notes particularly. In short we think Mr. Bryan's voice is equal if not superior to any male voice we ever heard in purity and flexibility and sweetness.

The University Catalogue

For 1887-8 is before us. It is a handsome volume. It shows 204 students. There are abundant proofs of improvement in all departments. Not only regular courses are given, but full opportunity is afforded for special training.

Besides the monthly lectures by able men of the University and elsewhere, the Mitchell Scientific Society and the Shakers Club, we notice new societies, viz one for the study of North Carolina History and the Seminary of Literature and Philology. All the departments have Post graduate courses. We are glad to see provisions made for the post, who are allowed to give notes for tuition, which is $50 per annum.

Before the High School

P. H. Pelletier, Esq. delivered before the New Berne High School his third and last lecture on Government yesterday afternoon. He alluded in a very clear and concise manner to the different branches of State Government, the wisdom of their formation, their checks upon one another, their strong guard of the rights and property of citizens, and the great duty of the rising generation, one and all to study diligently and understand well the grand principles that underlie the framework of this magnificent system, in which all are deeply interested. His lecture was attentively listened to for nearly an hour, and he closed with a well deserved tribute to woman as a powerful, yet quiet exponent in the affairs of government.

Assault With Intent to Kill

Justice E. G. Hill has been engaged for a day or two in the trial of L. B. Humphrey and a man named Wiggins for an assault on Caesar Becton, col., near Dover, with intent to kill.

It appears that Caesar was fired upon twice from ambush a little after sundown on the 20th of April and had one finger shot off. He charged the defendants with the crime.

Chas. H. Brown, Esq., of Kinston, and P. H. Pelletier, Esq., of this city appeared for the defendants and W. E. Clarke, Esq., for the State.

After examination of witnesses and argument by counsel, Wiggins was discharged and Humphrey was bound over in the sum of two hundred dollars for his appearance at the next term of our Superior Court.

Democratic State Executive Committee

RALEIGH, N. C., May 8th, 1888. To the Delegates of the Democratic State Convention:

The railroad companies in the State have generally agreed to have round-trip tickets at excursion rates on sale, for delegates to the Democratic State Convention to be held in this city on May 31st inst. to be good from May 28th to June 4th, both inclusive. So delegates will be careful to buy tickets to Raleigh and return.

R. H. BATTLE, Chairman, &c. B. C. BECKWITH, Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM.

After a long and painful sickness from consumption, on May 4, Miss Josephine Hall yielded her breath to God who gave it. She leaves a sorrowing and desolate sister, who trusts that she is at rest and has joined father and mother and other dear ones in the home above. "Come unto me, all ye that labor [and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. xi. 28.

"Asleep in the ranks of the dead"

"With an equal splendor The morning sun rays fall, With a touch impartially tender, On the blossoms blooming for all, Under the sod and the dew, Waiting the judgment day."

A FRIEND.

Portraits.

In oil or crayon from life or small pictures done by Miss Aurora Mace, who is teaching drawing and painting by latest methods, at her residence in Johnston street.

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

May 11th, 1888

The members elect of the new board of city councilmen met at the city hall this evening at six o'clock.

R. P. Williams of the first ward called the meeting to order, when Dr. Ugo Slover of the second ward, B. B. Lane of the third, V. A. Crawford of the fourth, and H. H. Simmons of the fifth, all members elect, were found to be present.

The members then proceeded to elect members at large. B. B. Lane nominated David Styron, who was elected. R. P. Williams nominated Ralph Gray, who was elected. V. A. Crawford nominated John H. Thomas and Dr. Ugo Slover nominated E. K. Bryan. John H. Thomas was declared elected. The newly elected members after being sworn in took their seats.

The chairman then announced the meeting ready to proceed to the election of officers, and the board was about to proceed to nominate the city tax collector, when Dr. Slover arose and protested against the election of any officers until a mayor was elected, as the charter required.

R. P. Williams moved that the board proceed to elect the tax collector and other officers, which was carried.

V. A. Crawford then nominated Selas Fulcher for city tax collector.

Dr. Ugo Slover and J. H. Thomas were appointed tellers a ballot being taken. Fulcher was declared elected.

B. B. Lane nominated Mr. J. T. Lewis for city marshal. Dr. Slover nominated John M. Hargett. A ballot being taken a tie was the result, when R. P. Williams voted for J. T. Lewis, who was declared elected.

Thomas Wilson and J. B. Thomas were placed in nomination for police man; a ballot resulted in the election of Thomas Wilson.

J. E. Gaskill was placed in nomination, and a ballot being taken he was declared elected.

M. T. Roberts was placed in nomination, and a ballot being taken was declared elected.

V. A. Crawford nominated W. N. Rusk for sexton of Cedar Grove Cemetery and he was elected. He also nominated Robert Williams for sexton of Greenwood Cemetery and he was elected.

Mr. Geo. Broadstreet was nominated for superintendent of pumps and was elected.

V. A. Crawford then placed in nomination E. H. Meadows for mayor for the ensuing year. R. P. Williams nominated James J. Howard. A ballot being taken Mr. Meadows was declared elected, which was upon motion made unanimous.

Dr. Ugo Slover then tendered his resignation as a member of the board, which lay over under the rules.

V. A. Crawford then nominated Clark & Clark for City Attorneys who were elected.

R. P. Williams nominated Dr. Frank Duff for Port Physician and he was elected.

The minutes were read and on motion adopted.

The board then adjourned to Monday night next at 8:30 o'clock.

SILAS FULCHER, Clerk

Stonewall Items.

The election for town officers in our town was a quiet affair, no opposition to the regular nominee, all true Democrats, and resulted in electing for Mayor C. H. Fowler, and for Commissioners Dr. Parsons, Jno. B. Quick and A. H. Whitcomb. In Bayboro there was some opposition by the "dry" who seem to want to force their ideas whether or no, but the result was the election of the regular ticket. For Mayor ex-Sheriff D. B. Hooker; for Commissioners, Wm. E. Hooker, Church Miller and Jno. T. Cooper. To see their names will satisfy all what their politics are.

On last Thursday, accompanied by Mrs. L., we paid a visit to our boy, H. W. Lane, at Smith's creek, or as the change has it, Oriental, for Messrs. Harrison & Betts who are running the best-appointed mill in the county both night and day, cutting 50,000 feet of yellow pine lumber in every twenty-four hours; and also a full stock of general merchandise for the convenience of that section. Capt. Betts and Mr. Harrison are each having commodious and comfortable dwellings under construction and will be completed shortly; and Messrs. G. W. Right & Son are adding greatly to the prosperity of the place, notwithstanding their ill luck in the loss of one of their best mills recently, they anticipate adding a more efficient one in its place in the near future; and Mr. Sam McDaniel who is as clever and accommodating a merchant as any place can boast of. Also C. W. Mason & Wm. B. Lippin who are ever ready to wait on their customers. All seem to be doing a good trade and prospering. Jas. W. Caroon is general superintendent of Harrison & Betts mill, and in him they have a man who knows his business and is ever ready and willing to execute it. He is the right man in the right place.

THE A. M. E. Z. CONFERENCE

SINCE LAST

The ninth day of the general conference of the Zion Methodist Church convened yesterday morning in St. Peter's church and after devotional exercises in which Bishop J. H. Thompson, Rev. R. H. Dyon of the District of Columbia, and Rev. Jno. M. Butler of Alabama, participated. Bishop Thompson on taking the chair, counseled moderation and playful candor in the existing question of electing more bishops.

Jacob Thomas offered a resolution to postpone the further consideration of the subject pertaining to the election of bishops, which was voted down by a vote of 25 yeas and 15 nays.

The discussion on the resolution for two more bishops was continued.

Mr. M. H. Phillips of Virginia wanted to define the position which was in favor of an increase of bishops. He arrived at the conclusion from an over-weighing consideration of the unworthy unworthy in office. He believed that the board of bishops should be elected for the interest, but his resolution comes from a noble faith by which we would be assured that these men would be worthy to carry out their task.

John Henry Taylor lay delegate from Baltimore, argued that the present board of bishops with 15 members is too small and much to be desired.

J. W. Collins of New York was of the opinion that if the present board did their duty the general fund would be raised that would pay for every card work and be known as the "Zion Fund" and ready to answer the call of the day.

George C. Taylor of Virginia represented that the sentiment of the people of the central North and in the hope that the general fund would be raised to assist the struggling churches that have faith and served the church.

W. L. Wesley of Florida had a card at the table, but he was not heard. He proposed that the board of bishops be increased to 20.

John H. Thompson of Alabama had a card at the table, but he was not heard. He proposed that the board of bishops be increased to 20.

J. B. Smith of North Carolina came to the conference and he was not heard. He proposed that the board of bishops be increased to 20.

J. H. White of New Jersey expressed the sentiment of the conference by representing in advocating the election of additional bishops, and he was not heard. He proposed that the board of bishops be increased to 20.

W. H. Tucker of Kentucky said that it was the duty of the members to conduct legislation as to have it promote, extend and uphold the kingdom of God, which he believed could be better effected by a larger board of bishops.

J. E. Collins of New York said that the twenty six annual conferences of the church and the 200,000 members needed the fatherly care of more episcopal officers, with two thousand churches to be visited, and only two bishops to perform the work, it must be plain that there is a necessity. He was of the opinion that additional bishops could be paid on the present basis of fifty cents per member, which after making reasonable allowance for failure, that a respectable balance would be in the general fund if the pastors did their duty.

G. B. Walker of Kentucky showed from facts and figures, upon the present financial plan, that the resources of the church, after meeting all of its appropriations, would leave a surplus of $15,700, providing the pastors did their duty. In asking whether they would do their part, a thundering assent went up in response that they would.

A number of strong resolutions were made by other members, which were well received.

The measure to elect two bishops was passed by a vote of 20 to 10 and a storm of enthusiasm, and the conference fixed the last day of the session in the election of the new bishops.

Lemon Elixir

REV. G. K. VINCH, publisher of the Alabama Christian Advocate, Birmingham, writes: "I travel all over the State, my friends say they find Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir a most excellent medicine. My book keeper and foreman both use it in place of calomel pills, etc."

A prominent Minister Writes

DR. MOZLEY—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

Rev. C. C. Davis, Eld. M. E. Church South, No. 28 Tattnell St., Atlanta, Ga., From North Georgia.

Mrs. N. A. McEntire writes from Spring Place: For many years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, sick headaches and nervous prostration, caused from biliousness and constipation. I tried many remedies, but got no permanent relief until I used Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir. I am now in better health than for many years. My daughter has been subject to chills and fever from her infancy. I could get nothing to relieve her; the Lemon Elixir has restored her to perfect health.

Sold by Druggists, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Prepared by Dr. H. Moxley, Atlanta, Ga.

That Rarest of Combinations. True delicacy of flavor with true efficacy of action has been attained in the famous California fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. Its pleasant taste and beneficial effects have rendered it immensely popular. It cleanses the system, cures constiveness, etc. R. N. Duffy, agent, New Berne, N. C.

Europe Under a War Cloud

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it. He may not attack though we should fear for his resolution if he were invited, but he will stand waiting, fully armed and resolute that in the last resort the strength of Germany will suffice to win any field. He is by the judgment of every man who knows him a fighting Hohenzollern and every student of history recognizes what that designation means. On the west we see France rushing in a passion of hope and fear, toiling herself at the feet of a military dictator who believes himself a man of destiny, and knows only too well that he can find his power only against a man, too, whose hand must be partially turned by the most sudden and most mysterious systems of war at the very least. We are not on the side of war at the very least. We hold it to be the path of wisdom to keep out of a struggle which will involve it armies that race and bring forward the field with which we can cope only by the help of allies who will demand their price. If we must fight let us fight at the end, but that is no reason why we should not be prepared, with all ships in commission, the arsenals full, and every plan ready and untried, stood by our great officers. We can be struck in Egypt, easy, in Malta, more easily in Belgium, most easily of all, and it is only the part of prudence to be ready for the worst possibilities. They may never happen, and in our history rarely do happen, but in Europe just now the one idea ruling is that there is a remedy for all things, and we who are rich should be strong and ready to fight.

There is not a rift visible in the cloud that hangs over all Europe. We have no wish to play the part of alarmist, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the accumulating signs that serious dangers threaten to England as well as to peace which forces all civilized men to stand as it were, in hushed awe and panic around the Emperor Frederick's lying bed springs from no mere emotion of natural pity for a fate at once melancholy and so grand. The world feels that emotion keenly has felt it through all the weary disputes of the leaders and the sickening accounts of pale jealousy and intrigue, but it feels also the first thrills of an overmastering fear. With the monarch who faces death so calmly, glad as he avows to be that a life checked with unrealized hopes, their passions away, the highest barrier now standing between us and European conflagration. His own early youth inexperienced and military, cannot venture on these grand combinations, those immense and fast reaching compromises by which alone the great war could be permanently averted, perhaps will not even wish to avert it