That Harvest of Combustions.

True delicacy of flavor with true efficacy of action has been attained in the famous California fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. Its pleasant taste and beneficial effects have rendered it immensely popular. It cleanses the system, cures constipation, etc. B. N. Duffy, agent, New Bern, N. C.

THE STATE CONVENTION

Fowle Nominated on 234 Ballot.

RALEIGH, May 31, 1888.

The convention remained in session until 2 a. m. this morning. After the 14th ballot Mr. Glenn of Forsythe brought forward the name of John A. Gilmer which was received with loud applause. On the 15th ballot Fowle received 358, Stedman 294, Alexander 203, Gilmer 165. Another ballot was ordered which showed that the convention was not yet ready for the "dark horse," Gilmer receiving only 29 and Clark 8. After some confusion over a motion to adjourn the convention took a recess to 10 o'clock.

Upon reassembling an attempt was made to stave off balloting until the delegates to the National convention could be elected, but the convention would have none of this. Balloting was begun and continued with about the same results until the 23d, when Fowle received 449, Stedman 330, Alexander 180. The enthusiasm of the Fowle men was almost unbounded. At this point Mr. McDowell, who headed the Mecklenburg delegation, ascended the platform and stated that in consequence of a telegram from Capt. S. B. Alexander, which he held in his hand, the Mecklenburg delegation asked permission to retire for ten minutes for consultation. Permission was granted and the balloting suspended until they returned. The telegram was a request from Captain Alexander to withdraw his name. Intense interest prevailed now as the final struggle had come. "Fowle and Alexander" shouted the Fowle men. "Stedman and Alexander" shouted the other side, but they evidently saw that unless the solid Alexander vote went to their man the "silver-tongued orator" would go in. The ballot proceeded with considerable excitement and was finally announced as follows: Daniel G. Fowle, 523 1-10; Charles M. Stedman, 435 9-10; S. B. Alexander, 2.

Major Stedman came forward and in a very neat, patriotic and timely little speech thanked his friends for the support they had given him and urged them to rally around the standard-bearer of the party. Judge Fowle then came forward and was introduced by Major Stedman as the next Governor of North Carolina. Judge Fowle entertained the Convention for about twenty minutes in a stirring, ringing speech, and promised to meet them all at their counties between now and election day and tell them why the Democratic party should remain in power.

Capt. S. B. Alexander was unanimously nominated for Lieutenant-Governor by a rising vote.

[We had arranged for further telegrams but from some cause they failed to reach us.]

The Superior Court.

The court met at 9 o'clock. The case of State vs. John Williams for larceny was tried. Jury returned a verdict of guilty, and defendant was sentenced to twelve months in penitentiary.

State vs. Frank Commander for stealing wood; defendant plead guilty; judgment suspended.

State vs. Phebe Franks; slander of virtue. Solicitor White for State; W. E. Clarke for defence. Verdict not guilty.

State vs. Henry Rouse; affray. Defendant plead guilty; judgment suspended.

Several tax cases were disposed of, and court adjourned till 9 o'clock today.

The Weldon Nominees.

We are not familiar with the qualifications of all of the numerous aspirants of the Republican party in this district to congressional honors, never having given it much consideration. But we thought that our townsman L. J. Moore would fill the place with as much "acceptability" to the people of the district as any one of that political persuasion probably could. Unfortunately for him his party took a different view of matters and decided otherwise in the convention on Wednesday.

There was a division of sentiment in the convention which resulted in the nomination of two candidates—both colored. We understand from those who know that both of these are well worthy of the confidence imposed in them by their friends. This is not surprising when the immense preponderance of the colored vote in the district is considered and the minority in the district should be glad that while they insist on the color line that yet in the selection of their candidates, they do so good judgment in taking men of good repute and abilities such as we learn both of these nominees to be.

The Work of Yesterday at Raleigh.

At the time of this writing we only know of the work of the convention yesterday, so far as the nomination of candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. Judge Fowle is well known throughout the State and has long been the choice of a large number of persons for the position now assigned him. Of his fitness there is no question. And his knowledge of the wants of the State, its resources, capabilities, and acquaintance with the people, from the seacoast to the western border, are equalled only by Governor Jarvis himself. Judge Fowle has probably visited every one, or nearly every one, of the counties in the State. He has engaged in so many campaigns for others, that it will be no new thing to him to start out on the one now before him. His long residence at the capital has brought him in contact with representative men from every hamlet in the State, a very important matter to any one called upon to fill the gubernatorial chair of North Carolina, and we believe was the key to the very successful administration of Governor Jarvis, and one that we beg pardon for saying, but candor compels us to do so, has been the great need of the present incumbent.

The name of Syd Alexander is known throughout the State, and for the position of Lieutenant-Governor his experience in the legislature has given him eminent qualifications. He too is quite familiar with the representative men of the State and doubtless well informed as to the wishes of the people. His selection to the second place on the ticket after being so strongly pressed by his friends for the first, is in itself an assurance that he is well qualified, capable and worthy.

The ticket so far is unexceptional, though not our first choice, and we look forward to a brilliant campaign and triumphant election in November. If the convention shall do as well in the selection of the other names to fill the ticket, place Gov. Stedman and Gov. Jarvis on as electors for the State at large, we shall have a campaign such as has not been seen since the days of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." We shall roll up such a majority as will set at rest forever the timid minds of those who fear that North Carolina may ever forget the dark rule of Radicalism.

The Closing Exercises of the Graded School.

The closing exercises of the Graded School take place today. At 9 o'clock there will begin an exhibition of the attainments of the school in spelling, reading, recitations and calisthenics in the school building. At 11 the school will march to the theatre where the standing of successful pupils will be announced; after which the annual address will be delivered by Mr. James M. Brinson. It is hoped that parents and friends of education generally will be present and show their interest thereby, in the advancement of education and of the school in particular. Let all who wish the school to prosper be there and see what has been done and is doing.

Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of the New Bern High School came off yesterday evening at 5 o'clock at the theatre. The rain prevented a large crowd being present. Rev. Dr. Vass led in opening prayer, after which John S. Long, Esq., in a few well chosen introductory remarks announced the program. It consisted of presenting prizes to all pupils that had won distinction during the past term. There were quite a number of them awarded. In appropriate remarks they were presented in the literary department by Judge A. S. Seymour; in history by Rev. W. W. Shields; in mathematics by Gen. Robert Ransom; in attendance and deportment by Rev. Dr. Vass; in the classical department by H. R. Bryan, Esq. The exercises were interesting and showed that good and thorough work had been done in the school. It was regretted that sickness prevented Prof. Neal from being present.

Death at Gombroon.

Mr. Harvey Cooper, of Louisville, Ky., and a nephew of Mrs. Senator Vance, died at Gombroon, the seat of Senator Vance among the Black Mountains, on Sunday. The young gentlemen had been in the habit for several summers past of spending his summers here, or in the vicinity.—Asheville Citizen.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles and was cured of Rheumatism of ten years' standing." Abraham Hays, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, writes: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 30 years' experience is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at N. N. Duffy's drug store.

Musical Feast

There has been but little public amusement given by our home talent this season, consequently the musicale of Wednesday evening had been hailed with much delight.

The weather during the day had not at all been inviting, nevertheless a good audience was present, and it was a select one. The program was not long, but contained such a variety as to meet all the different tastes.

The opening piece was an instrumental duet, "The Baladine" by Misses Helen Smith and Rosa Darr. We do not profess to be a musical critic, still we have our opinions. This piece was nicely played and was really a pretty air, but the little Misses did not put force enough in it to be properly appreciated in a large hall filled with people. This is quite different from playing in the parlor. The next was a solo, "When Love's Done Sweetheart" by Miss Mamie Stinson. Miss Stinson has a full, rich voice and soon won the admiration of the audience by her sweet singing. A hearty applause provided it. An instrumental solo by Miss Katie Daniels—"Sonata" Pathetique Op. 14 No. 1, Beethoven, was one of the prettiest pieces we ever listened to. It was complete in harmony and expression, and contained most beautiful runs which were thought out with grace and ease by the performer, and it lacked volume, particularly in the latter part, we think the location of the piano. It was too far back on the stage, it reverberated from the standing board above. Fanny Daniels' deep voice was a recitation by Miss Flora Marks. The powers of the young lady as an orator are too well known for it, at tempt any description, but it seems in this that all her former efforts were surpassed. Her voice was finely modulated and the enunciation so clear, that we dare say there was no person present that did not hear every utterance. A vociferous applause went up for an encore, but a graceful bow was the only acknowledgment.

On the program next was an instrumental duet, "Hungarian Dances," Brahms, by Miss Chattie Credle and Ola Ferber. It was a bright piece and they did credit to themselves in its rendition. The appearance of Miss Myra Southgate of Norfolk, was greeted with cheers, but when she waded to the edge of the stage and began to sing, the audience was spellbound. Her voice at once showed high training and under perfect control. She sang well a high soprano but sweetest as a mezzo-soprano. The house was carried away and only satisfied with a repetition. Mr. J. K. Willis followed in a bass solo, "I am King O'er all the Sea," Thompson. Mr. Willis has a powerful voice and one that is striking. He commands the full compass of the scale, and with the exception of too much star rating in graduation, he has, in accordance to our taste, one of the finest male voices we know of. The very fine and charming duet, "Les Dames de Seville," (Op. 43) Schubert, was played by Miss Carrie Claypool and Emma Katie Jones. They played well and showed skill in fingering. Miss Stinson again sang "Flow Stream Flow" Wellings in which she displayed even a more smooth and gentle flow of melody than in the former piece. From the first note in "Ballad Music" Rubenstein, by Misses Katie Daniels and Fannie Jones, it was evident that a sufficient amount of vim and dash would be in this piece, and the emotions were immediately captivated by the fascinating strains. Miss Marks appeared in another recitation and received bursts of applause. The closing was a song by Miss Southgate that was admirably suited to draw out the qualities of a superior trained voice. She fully sustained the reputation that had preceded her. All the accompaniments were played by Mrs. Shields and Miss Hattie Harrison.

The entire proceedings were of a delightful nature and reflected much credit upon Miss Harrison and those who gave her aid. The floral decoration on the stage was pronounced by many to be the most elaborate and handsome ever seen, and with a change of scenery from the newly painted hall, a splendid effect was produced, and everybody left joyful.

MUSING.

And then I felt as though on zephyr's wings I was carried onward through the ethereal space.

And inwound of the most entrancing kinds unto my senses, onward wafted me. And still it seemed as though my soul did yearn

For that which makes its sorrow still complete. As still it has it not. And as I dreamed Or did on zephyr's soar, a change Came o'er the spirit of my dream.

For there before my eyes stood forth a form. Yet still I sorrow knew, for far 'Twas that she and I was spread A distance, most overpowering to me. But that to her, most easy was to span And in my soul a sickness most intense Felt for as she stood in all her lovely might.

She noticed not my anguish, though in plain line 'Twas writ upon my face. I could not call to her, my tongue Was tied, yet still the picture stood An anguish that no pen could trace was mine. For in her presence I could see that link

That then would make the chain of life complete. And still without my reach the vision stood. My heart in rapture yearned for but one look.

And it came not, nor did the face Of her seem to denote, that any of her attention claimed. Save pleasure and a careless childish thought

Of pleasing her own heart's claims was there. And then the vision faded from my sight and I found myself a still more wretched being.
