Arabian and Persian Horses.

The general run of Arabs are no doubt firstrate horses, as far as they are too small to mount satisfactorily any but native cavalry. There are, of course, exceptional animals which have size and power enough for anything, but they are so few that they may be left out of the general estimate which we take of the race. For any soldier whose weight is such that he can be mounted on an Arab he will be found the hardist, soundest and most docile of war horses. He will Swarms of Customers tant series has ever been undertaken do an enormous amount of work on very little and very indifferent food and will always bear himself well is he, more than other horses, suseye, which is liable to cataract. daunted pluck, which is never more clearly shown than when by any chance he is ill, when all veterimary surgeons will allow that he is a most admirable patient, resisting and throwing off the effects of all ness of treatment in a way that no horse of another race can equal. Persian homes have always been found among the most generally useful remounts in India, and they of cavalry and in gun teams. They have more power and size than Arabs, with much of the same constitutional good qualities, and-a matter of great importance to the State they are generally cheaper EXAMINE HIS IMMENSE AUGRE ter fictions will appear every in proces
