The Music Department is under the care of teachers of culture and refinement, who have taken unusual pains to qualify themselves for their work, and who are well known to patrons as most popular and successful.

The lady in charge of the Art Department gives her cuting time to her work, and spends most of her vacations in securing additional instruction under the best masters.

The location of the Institute was personal in preference to several others, in some respects more eligible, on account of its celebrity for health; and the listory of the school for forty years mily sustains this reputation. Its isalth record is not surpassed by any maticulion in the State.
