THE story that Mr. Harrison is dissatisfied; that he proposes to decline the nomination for President and that Blaine is to be put upon the ticket while the bloom is on his reception boom, absurd as For the benefit of our readers it is, shows that a great many Republicans are chagrined by the excessive exaltation of the man from Maine. There is no likelihood that Mr. Harrison will decline. He may be sore, but a battery of artillery could not shake him off the ticket. Such a swapping of horses as is hinted at in Republican circles would give Mr. Cleveland an easy walk over.
