Wilmington Messenger: Yesterday morning, while the street gang under Mr. Dan Sheehen were cutting some weeds in Mesers. When the weeds had been cleared away so the webs could be plainly seen, the discovery was made that each had the word "Wilmington. N. C," printed across the face, as if photographed there. Every one who saw the curious spectacle was struck with wonder, and at least twenty-five people, white and black, gathered around to get a glimpse of the curiosity. The words were sufficiently plain for each to readily read it, and one of the webs which was placed on a sheet of paper retained the outlines for a conwebs were about five feet apart when discovered, and were of a gauzy, fanhow the words got there, and various were the hypotheses offered. Some advanced the theory that they had been photographed there from the printed words on some flying pieces of paper; others thought the spiders must have made their webs of paper with the words printed thereon, and that the paper had been reduced to a film, while others flew from one explanation to another. While none of the theories may be true, the remarkable circumstance itself is vouched for by Mr. Sheehan and all who saw it.
