DUTY.

It is related that Gen. Robert E. Lee said, "Duty is the sublimest word in the English language."

Be this as it may, there is no period of life, and no condition of humanity, when the demands of duty are not absolute. Duty is always imperative. The only debatable point in regard to it is, what is duty?

Man's first duty is to his God. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength, this is the first commandment." Obedience to this command assures perfect happiness. Few, very few, attain unto it, but all may join with the great apostle and say: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The purest Christian life has its blemishes; but the humblest Christian points the way to heaven and God! Love to God involves love to man. This principle has innumerable exemplifications, all declarative of their divine origin. A man must love his child. Here nature comes in and enforces the demand of duty, but duty is none the less imperative. In cases of this kind duty and natural inclination go hand in hand.

But there are conditions in which natural inclination and duty are opposed to each other, and it is womanliness in these conditions the of a woman show themselves that the manliness of a man and in ways most pleasing to God and most honoring to humanity.

This is a selfish world. All men and women are more or less selfish. It is nevertheless a duty to feed the hungry and clothe the naked. The day may be bleak and dreary, nevertheless we must go out to rescue and to save, remembering that the day will come in the which the blessed Redeemer will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto these, ye did it unto me."

It is very hard to return good for evil; but the duty is imperative. If every thunder cloud that rises was met by thunder cloud; if every night was succeeded by night, this world, now so beautiful, would be the dismal prison house where hope, and joy and life would be bound in adamantine chains. The sunbeam must play upon the bosom of the storm and hush its thunder; and day, radiant with beauty and glory, must chase night from city and hamlet, from valley and hill, until the world sparkles with dew drops and blazes with splendors. We must return good for evil if we would reach the highest beatitudes of the soul.

Our true knowledge is to know our own ignorance. Our true strength is to know our own weakness. Our true dignity is to confess that we have no dignity, and are nobody and nothing in ourselves, and to cast ourselves down before the dignity of God, under the shadow of whose wings and in the smile of whose countenance alone is created being safe.

A Tale of an "H."

Charles Whymper, the well known engraver and animal painter of London, told a Pittsburg Dispatch man the following story a few years ago:

"I dined at Alderman So-and-so's last night, and as a mark of honor his fairest daughter was assigned to me to take down to dinner. She's a bright girl, but the way she drops her 'h's' is enough to make a man's hair turn gray. But I got along very nicely with her, and Lady Bletherington on the other side, until the ladies were on the eve of retiring to the drawing room.

"The Alderman had but recently moved out to Highgate; and I was talking about the beautiful scenery near the house, the views to be had from the windows, the fine air, and so on, when Miss —— suddenly said, 'I think I get prettier every day, don't you?'

"What could she mean? I didn't dare to answer her, so I said, 'I beg your pardon—what did you say?'

"'I said I think I get prettier every day.'

"There was no mistake in her words, so I said, 'Yes, I think so too, and no wonder in such fresh air and——'

"But just then she caught her mother's eye; and with the other ladies she rose and left the room. As she went out she looked back over her shoulder with such a withering scorn in her eyes that I knew I had put my foot in it somehow. Then it flashed upon me that I had misunderstood her; she had dropped an h; what she had said was not a silly compliment to herself—the sentence really was, 'I think Highgate prettier every day.'"

I think Mr. Whymper was never invited to Alderman So and so's again.

A Good Kind of Face to Have.

Memory of Events—This is shown by a wide, full forehead in the centre.

Reasoning Power—A high, long and well-defined nose and a broad face exhibits this great faculty.

Moral Courage—This faculty manifests itself by wide nostrils, short neck and eyes set directly in front.

Language—This faculty is exhibited in many parts of the face, particularly by a large mouth and large, full eyes, opened wide.

Self-esteem—This faculty shows itself in a long or deep upper lip. Large self-esteem gives one dignity, self-control and perfect independence.

Firmness—The presence of this faculty, when very large, is indicated by a long, broad chin. Firmness is synonymous with wilfulness, perseverance and stability.

Perception of Character—This is indicated by a long, high nose at the lower end or tip. This faculty is very useful, if not indispensible, to a judge in the exercise of the functions of his office.

Powers of Observation—The situation of this faculty is in the face, just above the top of the nose, filling out the forehead to a level with the parts on each side of the nose. It is a faculty which enables one to concentrate the mind upon the subject being discussed.

Conscientiousness—This is shown in the face by a square jaw, a bony chin, prominent cheek bones and a general squareness of the features of the entire face. To be conscientious means that one has a sense of justice, honesty of purpose, rectitude of character and moral courage.

Don't Fight the Team.

If a horse shows signs of stubbornness or contrariness, just get mad yourself, and you can rest assured you are fixed for the rest of the day, as long as you want to keep it up. Horses, like men, are generally set in their ways, and when a horse with only moderate sense gets into trouble with a man with only a moderate sense the two generally have a "monkey and parrot time" from morning till night. Well-bred horses are seldom stubborn and unruly, and in this respect there is a striking analogy between horses and men. Horses docile, obedient and tractable in the hands of one man are vicious and unruly in the hands of another. The reason is, the one knows how to manage them, the other does not. Bad dispositions are generally the result of bad handling. A few slaps and jerks, accompanied by a little sharp talk or a few fierce yells, get the most gentle horse clear beside himself and ready to worry and fret the remainder of the day. The more quiet and steady you keep your horses the better it will be for them, yourself and all concerned.

MR. JONES," said little Johnny to the gentleman who was making an afternoon call, "pa whiskey talk?"

"No, my child; how came you to ask such a question?"

"Oh, nothing, only ma said whiskey was beginning to tell on you."

Nuggets.

The lay of the land is what darkness broods over.

Passengers mustn't expect to hear the fib boom in calm weather.

It makes a general mad to see the white flag flying if it is won.

Even this did not pass Congress are not necessarily counterfeit.

The man with who clothes is never afraid of any dyer results.

Experts at picking locks—pickpockets.

"All that glitters is not gold," and all that blisters is not mustard.

Many a man has a put appearance after leaving a barber shop.

The amateur bandsist often gets a "sip" without asking for it.

Children shriek from being scalded. The same may be said of politicians.

Though a ship may not have a sing's vehicle in its cargo, it always has a cab-in.

Talk is cheap, except when you hire a lawyer to do it for you.

Lawyers ought to be good pastors they write lots of "sermons."

A doctor isn't a man who "doctors." He always presents the "bote bill."

You can't expect a physician out of patients to be a good hunter.

There are occasions in life when a man must regret that he started out to be a minister—for instance, when he has to marry to another man the girl he has always wanted to marry on his own account.

Cure for Ill-Temper.

A sensible woman, the mother of a young family, taught her children from the earliest childhood to consider ill-humor as a disorder which was to be cured by physic. Accordingly, she had always small doses ready, and the little patients, whenever it was thought needful, took rhubarb for the crossness. No punishment was required. Peevishness or ill-temper and rhubarb were associated in their minds always as cause and effect.

WONDERFUL CURES.

W. D. Hoyt & Co., Wholesale and Retail Druggists of Rome, Ga., says: We have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery, Electric Bitters and Bucklen's Arnica Salve for four years. Have never handled remedies that sell so well, or give such universal satisfaction. There have been some wonderful cures effected by these medicines in this city. Several cases of pronounced consumption have been entirely cured by use of a few bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken in connection with Electric Bitters. We guarantee them always. Sold, wholesale and retail, at R. N. Duffy's drug store.

INDIVIDUALITY

This is our own specific virtue. Ours already possesses only what we claim for it, but that is enough to satisfy any—even the skeptical.

PURE BLOOD IS OF PRICELESS VALUE.

The Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

My Dear Sir—I have for some time past used "B. B. B." as purifier of the blood and to build up the system generally, and consider it without exception the finest remedy of the kind in the market.

Yours with best wishes,
ARTHUR G. LEWIS,
Editor Southern Society.

EUFAULA, ALA., July 4, 1883.

B. B. B. Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gents—I cannot say enough in praise of your Blood Purifier. Twenty-five dollars per bottle would be a small price for it compared to good it did me and in so short a time. I was covered with sores all over my body and limbs, and I took stacks of so-called blood purifiers and none did me any good in fact I was daily growing worse. I bought a bottle of B. B. B. and before I had taken the first bottle I knew I had got hold of the right medicine, and after taking four bottles I was a well man.

VALDOSTA, GA., May 29, 1887.

I have been a sufferer from Catarrh for four years, I have used several different medicines that proposed to cure it, but never found any relief until I used Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) Since using that I have experienced great relief, and believe I will soon get a permanent cure. J. C. SMITH.
