CALVIN S. BRICE.

Calvin S. Brice, of Ohio and New York, is said to cherish an ambition consonant with his plethoric pocket book. He wants to succeed Payne Senator from Ohio. It is said that President Cleveland is interested in the political future of Brice and will do what he can in a quiet way to place the wonderful Ohioan in a position to make a contest for the seat he craves.—N. Y. World.

The World is a great newspaper, but its attacks upon Mr. Cleveland will not add to its greatness. The above paragraph is sensational only, and will deceive no one.

Mr. Cleveland is not the man to use high position "to place the wonderful Ohioan in a position to make a contest for the seat he craves." But even if Mr. Cleveland could be induced to prostitute his office, it would not be done to defeat Senator Payne. In an open contest involving nothing but a senatorial election—totally separated from personal and social environments—Mr. Cleveland might prefer Mr. Brice to Mr. Payne; but when it is remembered that the Senator is the father of Mrs. Whitney, the heroic defender of the President and the bosom friend of his peerless wife, it is impossible to believe the World's statement.

We are not of those who hold Colonel Brice responsible for the defeat of Cleveland. An abler man in command of the Democracy might have given us the victory, but of this we are not confident. That the party was disappointed in the amount of his contribution to the national Democratic campaign has often been asserted. "Brice's barrel didn't materialize worth a cent," was a very common expression just after the election. We do not mean to intimate that Mr. Brice is unworthy of Democratic support because he did not pour out his money like water and "buy floaters in blocks of five;" but, when a man is pressed for a position on the ground that he is very rich, and is ambitious to use his fortune in his country's service, he ought to meet the expectations necessarily involved in the situation. But, aside of this, if Mr. Brice has senatorial qualifications they have been held in reserve. He is a gentleman of some culture, a politician of some shrewdness, and a railroad man of acknowledged ability—but, he has given the world no evidence of his statesmanship.

We trust that the Democrats of the Ohio Legislature have more honor and manhood than to cast their votes for United Senator for Calvin S. Brice.

If heaven should grant one more gift to the country; the mistake would not be great were it a more sacred observance of parentage.

More Play Needed.

We Americans do not play enough. We use ourselves with over work. Our holidays are too few. And when we do slip out of the shafts of business, we don't shake the harness off. Care goes with us into the country.

The fact is, we begin business life too young. At the age when boys in other countries are at school many an American lad is behind the counter, or in the counting house or warehouse, and conversant with all the mysteries of bargain and sale. Young America makes contracts and effects sales at the time of life when English youngsters are trafficking in pigeons and guinea pigs and swapping peg tops. He drives through the country in a buggy showing samples, perhaps, or rails it from State to State soliciting orders, before he is fairly adolescent.

This early induction into the guild of Mammon makes us shrewder and sharper than other nations; but does it make us happier? Does it not blunt our capacity for wholesome recreation? By the time that a man thus brought up reaches the prime of life, is he not apt to be so completely saturated, as it were, with business, that he can think of little else?
