FERTILIZERS for Truckers and for Cotton Planters, at GEO. ALLEN & Co.

JAMES REDMOND, WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALER, has just received a good assortment of Native Wines and Brandies, and also some of the famous California Wine known as the "Angelica," made from the famous and delicious Angelica Grape. This Grape is only successfully cultivated in the Southern part of California; it is a very delicate grape and requires certain conditions of climate to bring it to excellence, which conditions are only met in that paradise of the United States. His native North Carolina Wines and Brandies from the vineyards of Garrett & Co. and J. Wharton Green are of very superior quality and are very pure.

SAYS the Record: In Philadelphia the average number of persons living on an acre of ground is 13; the number of dwellings per acre is 2½, and the persons per dwelling 6. In New York the number of persons on each acre of space is 53; the number of dwellings per acre 4, and the number of persons per dwelling 18.

"RUSSELL HARRISON'S friends in Helena, Mont., declare that he will be "pitching into the old man" (his father) through his newspaper there before the Administration is six months old." We think better of Russell than that. No doubt the Administration will be "pitched into," but he ought to "be at the bat" "to keep in" the family.

THE South is practically ignored altogether in the make up of the Cabinet. That certainly has a decided sectional look. The Democratic Administration was broadly Union, knowing no North South. There were two members from the South chosen by Mr. Cleveland for his Cabinet. We can see no grounds for special hope in the artful address. Its omissions are significant, and its shy and covert hints may not be overlooked.—Wilmington State.

James City Not Incorporated.
A private letter from Raleigh states that James City has not been incorporated, nor is it likely that it will be. If the property was not in dispute, and the inhabitants were clearly entitled to an act of incorporation, still they ought not to have it so long as they send such representatives to the General Assembly.

A Festival.
Some months ago a number of little girls organized the "Earnest Workers" for the purpose of assisting the poor. Miss Clementine Whitford is President and Miss Enlalia Willis is Secretary and Treasurer. Their first festival was held last night at the residence of Mrs. Ross Outhbert, and was highly enjoyed by all who had the good fortune to be present. More than eight dollars were made, which will be given to the poor. The little children have set the older people an example worthy of imitation.

A HEARTY RECEPTION.

F. M. Simmons Returns and is Met By the Fire Department and a Large Number of Citizens.

When the JOURNAL's special telegram announcing the passage of the bill for a public building in this city was made known last Monday morning a spontaneous sentiment arose that Mr. Simmons, who had served his constituents so faithfully and had crowned the closing hours of his term with obtaining the passage of this last measure, a measure which had been asked for and sought for a quarter of a century, should be tendered a public reception upon his arrival home.

Meers. Jas. W. Moore, R. H. Hilton, E. M. Pavie and others at once took hold of the matter, and the people responded with a unanimity rarely shown in this city.

THE MERCHANTS CLOSE.
On yesterday morning information was received that Mr. Simmons, who had gone to Raleigh after leaving Washington to look after matters of importance to his constituency, would arrive on the evening train. The news was at once circulated, by printed posters, through the city and the merchants agreed to close their stores at 6 o'clock and give their clerks an opportunity to join in the procession to the depot. In the mean time the fire department had agreed to turn out in full uniform.

THE PROCESSION.
Information having been received that the train would be thirty-five minutes late, the procession formed at 6:30 on Middle street. The New Berne and Atlantic fire companies in full uniform, with the Cornet Band in front, the New Berne on the right and the Atlantic on the left, with ropes to a carriage, the New Berne engine and a large number of citizens with torches following, the procession moved up Middle street to the depot.

At 6:33 the whistle announced the approach of the train. As it rolled in the band struck up "Hail to the Chief," the New Berne engine blew a long continuous whistle and for ten minutes the atmosphere was vivid with pyrotechnics. After the band had concluded Mr. Simmons alighted at the rear end of the passenger car and was at once conducted to the carriage drawn by the fire companies.

MR. CONGONON ILLUMINATES.
The procession moved from the depot down Queen street to Graves, down Graves to Middle. In passing the residence of D. Congdon & Son three hearty cheers were given. The residence was illuminated and on the outer wall of the front yard was a transparency about fifteen feet in length with the words, "Simmons Our Pride," and following was an enumeration of the appropriations secured by him for this section amounting in all to $190,000. The illumination and transparency were apt and timely and the Messrs. Congdon richly deserved the hearty cheers that were given. The procession moved down Middle street to Broad, down Broad to Craven, down Craven to Pollock, up Pollock to Middle, down Middle to South Front, down South Front to Craven, down Craven to the Cotton Exchange. All along the line of march the New Berne band kept up lively airs and fireworks illuminated the entire line.

AT THE EXCHANGE.
Arriving at the exchange Mr. Simmons was at once conducted to the Board of Trade rooms in the second story of the building. A balcony had been erected during the day and on this, after the band had rendered one of its best pieces, O. H. Guion, Esq., who sat with Mr. Simmons in the carriage from the depot, appeared and in language fit, chaste and eminently appropriate introduced

F. M. SIMMONS
who addressed the vast audience for about twenty minutes, feelingly and at times eloquently. To him after an almost continuous absence for two years this was indeed an unexpected pleasure, a happy return. He knew of but one interpretation to put upon this demonstration and that was, it is an ovation. You mean to say to me, said he, that my conduct has met with your approval. No success can compensate a man for the loss of the love and esteem of those who have confided in him, and no success can be greater than the retention of the confidence of those who have trusted him. He was unable to find words to express the gratitude that looms up from the great depths of his heart for this expression of the approval of his conduct while their representative. He told them frankly that he did not thirst for the distinction which attaches to a member of Congress; he only regretted that he had to leave Congress at a time when he thought he could accomplish a great deal more for his district than he had heretofore. He did not pretend to say that he had done everything that he could have done, but this demonstration is evidence that his constituents approved of what he has done. It was his intention if he had continued in Congress to have had a practice established for every five or six miles on every public road in the district. He told of the circumstances under which he secured the passage of the bill to erect a public building in New Berne, and he wished to tell the public of this city that they would be lacking in gratitude if they did not bestow upon Senator Ransom's proper appreciation of his efforts in their behalf.

We regret that we cannot give Mr. Simmons' remarks in full. He was evidently deeply moved at the unexpected ovation he had thought, no doubt, that he would be met on his arrival by friends but he had not anticipated such an outpouring of the people and such a demonstration as old New Berne had set upon short notice. In consequence the vast crowd from the depot of his heart for this manifestation of their approval. He knew that whatever success he had attained in this life was due in a great measure to the friends here at home and when he had stepped from the bottom of the train he felt that their good night.

At the conclusion of Mr. Simmons' speech the band struck up a lively air, and a grand pyrotechnic display and a tallion procession followed. The door of the Exchange was then thrown open and a brilliant service. Sam. Radcliff, Fred. Harrison, Charles Herrington and Bowden were present.

It was an occasion long to be remembered and shows that the people of New Berne are always ready to show their appreciation of merit and are ready to do honor to those who deserve it.

Where are They?
Bro. Creech of the Exchange in writing up our Fair makes the following just criticism on the art department: We went and looked around and recognized but one portrait of New Berne's glorious galaxy of the olden time, and that was one who was greatly beloved and honored in his time and whose memory is still green and cherished in the hearts of his countrymen—the courteous and dignified gentleman, the statesman, the scholar, the jurist, the warm-hearted friend, the Cavalier Bayard of North Carolina, the beloved Mathias E. Manly of New Berne. Where were these great men that he loved so well, some his contemporaries, some his friends, some with whom he had wrestled in the forum, some the flames at whose feet he had learned the lessons of life and first lighted the torch of his youthful ambition? Where were the Stanlys, father and son? Where was Gaston, the first Stanly's great rival, who owed much of his own greatness to that giant intellect and imperious will which sprang from no competition however gifted or cultured it might be? He it was and he alone that could strain Gaston to the top of his mettle and give and take blows that no other men of their time could give and take. Where were the Stanlys, grandfather Wright Stanly, son Jack Stanly and grandson Edward? Where were the Speights, father and son; that grand old gentleman, the elder Governor Speight, whose sad fate at Stanly's hands will always be the dark and bloody picture in New Berne's history; and the younger Speight, not conspicuous for brilliant gifts, but for the steady qualities that are often as useful, and also for being the last of the old time legislative Governors? Where were the Blackledges, the Grahams, the Shepards, the Bryans, the Daves, the Nashes, the older Badger that we once heard the venerable Judge Frederick Nash, a native New Bernian, say was the equal of his more distinguished son, George E. And where was that great man, Gen. Francis Nash, who fell at Brandywine, in the great struggle for independence, and now lies buried on Pennsylvania soil? Where was the likeness of Edward Graham, the rival of Gaston and Stanly? Oh! where were the paintings of all those great names and others that we do not now recall that have made New Berne a place of renown and given to its sons in all time a heritage of glory. And where were the beautiful and gifted women that were worthy of the love and made the refinement of these great men? Where were the lovely and patriotic matrons that lent their influence in urging on the ball of the revolution, where were the pictures of the Daves', the Gastons, the Blackledges? Where were the picture of that Esther Wake who by her feminine wifery won the hearts of North Carolinians in the legislative assemblies that met in New Berne in the troubled times of Governor Tryon's administration, and influenced legislation? Where was the likeness of the pretty girl who touched her "light fantastic" in a minute with Washington at a ball when he visited New Berne after he became President? Where was the likeness of Miss Jones, afterwards Mrs. Govan of South Carolina, who had the heart and offered hand of the wealthy and distinguished James C. Johnston of Edenton, and whose refusal of them made him a celibate and cynic, and who was said to have been the most beautiful woman of her time in North Carolina.

Persons wishing to improve their memories or strengthen their power of attention should send to Prof. L. A. Sette, 287 Fifth Ave., N. Y., for his prospectus post free, as advertised in another column.
