be secured through the subtle in. fluence of Protection.

- There is evident misapprehension why the South is solid. It is not because the South is hostile to the was the only man in the settlement North; nor is it because of burdens who, in the language of Deacon of taxation too grievous to be borne. It is deeper than all these. It is a question of blood-which will forever be superior to all other

The edict of the Almighty and Eternal fixed the supremacy of the white man, and no party can domithrottle Southern manhood by the forced ascendancy of the negro.
