HARRISON VS. QUAY.

Benjamin Harrison is now President of the United States, and is charged with an administration embracing the whole Union. To him party can make no appeal in opposition to the equality of the States. He is the guardian of the rights and liberties of every citizen, and, when these are involved, the voice of party must be silent.

They tell us that Senator Quay is plotting a raid against the Solid South. That "he proposes to take a hand in every State election in what he considers the doubtful Southern States between now and 1892, to the end that he may build up strength enough to carry them then." "He thinks Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and perhaps Florida, can be carried next time, and believes in beginning now his efforts to accomplish this."

We, the people, have no objection to Republican organization in the South. Indeed we prefer it, for it will be a powerful assistant to Democratic organization. It is perfectly legitimate for Mr. Quay to open a campaign of argument in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and Florida, and it would be gratifying to us for him to do so. If Republicanism can win in a fair contest before the people of these States, let it have its triumph, but we stand ready to repel the first intimation that corrupt methods are to be tolerated in North Carolina, whether the perpetrator of the wrong is the chairman of the National Republican Committee, or a private citizen of the State.

President Harrison is responsible for the conduct of Republicans during his administration. If he is the patriot and statesman he is represented to be, if he is the christian gentleman the preponderance of church members in his Cabinet indicates, he will chide and vindicate his perusal character and maintain the honor of his administration.

Elections are under State laws, and if Mr. Quay supposes that he can ride rough shod over this State he is in a fair way of having his information enlarged, and of learning valuable lessons of experience.

We do not believe that President Harrison will permit an invasion of the rights of the State, even for the purpose of securing Republican ascendancy. At all events the Democracy of the South is ready for any legitimate issue, and will be found true to her plighted faith in any emergency.

Cotton and Wool.

The crop of cotton is reported as being very large, possibly greater than that of any recent year. Yet the demand for the staple continues, and the size of the crop seems justified by the demand. The manufacture of cotton goods is now profitable, and new mills are in course of erection in all parts of America, and in this movement the South is conspicuous. Soon the raw material will be manufactured on the large scale near the place where it is grown, and the New England mills will be handicapped by their distance from the cotton fields in the competition with their Southern rivals. The outlook for cotton is therefore a bright one. Wool, the other great textile staple, cannot be so well placed in the economic sense, owing to the great deficiency of reliable statistics. At a recent convention, the National Association of Wool Growers took steps for establishing a better system, including the organization of a central bureau of statistics. When this is carried out, the wool producer will be greatly benefited, not only by accurate statements and forecasts of the market, but by a better gradation of qualities. It is proposed to have this matter, the grading of wool, taken up by the Association. Few staples need grading more imperatively, as wool suited for one brazen of manufacture may be quite unadapted to another; the carpet maker needs a material totally different from that required by the manufacturer of the zephyr worsted.

A PROCLAMATION.

By the President of the United States. WASHINGTON, April 5.—The following proclamation was issued late this afternoon:

A hundred years have passed since the government which our forefathers founded was formally organized. At noon on the thirtieth day of April, 1789, in the city of New York, and in the presence of an assemblage of heroic men, whose patriotic devotion had led the colonies to victory and independence, George Washington took the oath of office as Chief Magistrate of the new born Republic. This impressive act was preceded at 9 o'clock in the morning in all the churches of the city, by a prayer for God's blessing on the Government and its first President.

The centennial of this illustrious event in our history has been declared a general holiday by act of Congress, to the end that the people of the whole country may join in commemorative exercises appropriate to the day.

In order that the joy of the occasion may be associated with deep thankfulness in the minds of the people for all blessings in the past, and devout supplication to God for their gracious continuance in the future, representatives of the religious creeds, both Christian and Hebrew, have memorialized the Government to designate an hour for prayer and thanksgiving on that day.

Now therefore I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, in response to the pious and reasonable request, do recommend that on Tuesday, April 30, at the hour of 9 o'clock in the morning, the people of the entire country repair to their respective places of divine worship to implore the favor of God, that the blessings of liberty, prosperity and peace may abide with us as a people, and that His hand may lead us in the paths of righteousness and good deeds.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done in the city of Washington, this 4th day of April in the year of our Lord 1889, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirteenth.

BENJAMIN HARRISON,
By the President:
JAMES G. BLAINE,
Secretary of State.

The Dinner Table.

Eat your soup out of the spoon your hostess provides for the purpose. You may be able to dispose of it faster by using the ladle, but you may disconcert her by asking for it. Hastiness or greediness is never comme il faut.

In eating fish do not swallow the bones; it may be more elegant, but hardly adds to your comfort. Slip them quietly and unobserved into your pocket and take them to your bird, as the birds can eat fish-bones with perfect impunity.

Do not tuck your napkin under your chin; it gives you an exceedingly infantile expression and detracts greatly from your appearance; but should it be of the finest damask, you may tuck it into your pocket if unobserved.

Should you in giving a dinner invite Benjamin Butler, do not count your spoons, or have private detectives as waiters. It is not kind, and might cause a slight embarrassment. A good hostess should have a proper regard for her guests' feelings, and should there be any ex-boudiers present she should not playfully allude to Canada in any way. It may be witty, but scarcely in good form.

Do not eat your bread with a knife. You may slice your fingers in the operation; besides, sandwiches are provided for you by the hostess should you desire them.

While eating Roman punch do not jocularly allude to Caesar's death being caused by too many Roman punches, no matter how apropos it may be; it does not show a proper respect for either the dead or living. Death at all times is harrowing, and jokes dating back to 44, B. C., equally so. Always keep the conversation as bright as possible, but do not make a spectacle of yourself in any way; it disgusts people, and gives the hostess serious doubts of again inviting you.

Should a thirsty fly drop in your wine dip your fingers in and gently draw him out, with such witty remarks as you do not want this on your wine, or, "he is in the swim," or any such witty remarks your versatile mind might suggest, laughing heartily all the time, and let him crawl slowly over the damask cloth, shaking his wings and leaving a trail behind him. Such actions show perfect command over yourself and will disconcert your neighbors, showing them off to a bad advantage, while it gives you an opportunity to get in some good work on terrapin and other "articles of vertu" near you.

If you should have brandied cheese, do not suck all the brandy out and leave the cheese, or vice versa. The cheese alone is strong enough, but combined with brandy it might make you hilarious and interfere with the enjoyment of the guests.

In eating olives permit me to implore you to do so with as much grace as possible. Do not, with a horrible noise, blow the stones from your mouth, making a target of a picture in the opposite end of the room; besides being rude, it is dangerous to the unfortunate guests opposite, who, we think, would naturally object emulating Stephen. Should they be smaller than the average, playfully alluded to them as "Olivettes." It will bring you into prominence, and give an excellent impression of your wit.

Should you be so unfortunate as to be of a musical temperament refrain from wistling "Boulanger's March" through your teeth, no matter how you may desire it it would not be kind—and do not run scales, major, minor or Fairbanks, up and down the table; it makes your neighbors decidedly uncomfortable, and gives them the unpleasant idea that you are troubled with St. Vitus' dance or wish to serve yourself off their plates.

Severe Cases of Blood Poison.

Thousands suffer from blood poison, who would be cured if they gave B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) a trial. Send to the Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., for book of wonderful cures, that convince the most skeptical. It is sent free.

J. O. Gibson, Meridian, Miss., writes: "For a number of years I suffered untold agonies from blood poison. Several prominent physicians did me little if any good. I began to use B. B. B. with very little faith, but, to my utter surprise it has made me a well and hearty person."

Z. T. Halberton, Macon, Ga., writes: "I contracted blood poison. I first tried physicians, and then went to Hot Springs. I returned home a ruined man physically. Nothing seemed to do me any good. My mother persuaded me to try B. B. B. To my utter astonishment every ulcer quickly healed."

Benj. Morris, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "I suffered years from syphilitic blood poison which refused to be cured by all treatment. Physicians pronounced it a hopeless case. I had no appetite, I had pains in hips and joints and my kidneys were diseased. My throat was ulcerated and my breast a mass of running sores. In this condition I commenced a use of B. B. B. It healed every ulcer and sore and cured me completely within two months."

"I am a self-made man," said a sharper, the other day, to a gentleman whom he had just got the best of in a bargain. "I am glad to hear you say so," responded the gentleman, "for it relieves my Maker of a great responsibility."
