Hail, sacred morn that saw the Lord arise! Twas thine to break the fetters of the tomb and bring life and immortality to light. Earth wakes, and from garden, field and woodland-from city, town and country, rises the exultant shout, "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept," Hallelnjah! The Lord. God Omnipotent reigneth!

Therefore came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre, just as it began to dawn ard the first day of the week. They came, not to witness a e or hear the voice of an but to pay the tribute of onen's love to their buried Lord. They came with hearts as sad and my as the shadows of the night that were still lingering around

Bishop Dudly beautifully says,

"Wisely, therefore, did the church in the old time set apart this queen featival, this annual commemoration of the supreme event whereof every Lord's day doth tell abroad the story. Wise is her appointment that once in the year, when the earth is waking up from her long winter sleep, in prophecy of immortality,men shall enter into God's courts with special thanksgiving and praise, to tidings of joy, to behold the evidence of their reality.

"In the early dawn came the thousand, thousand living women to see the place where He will meet them; and they know that they hear His own voice speaking to their spirits in tones of tender, familiar greeting. To us men, rearful and slow of heart to believe, now, as in the old time, they—the woman—bring the blessed news of life and hope, and, hastening to the pretences, grow stronger, wealthier and more popular every year. The Public, being of magnanimous disposition, and unwilling to give trouble without rendering a quid pro quo, will lug out his numer-ous wallets, disburse without a murmur, and carry off for the nonce quite a load of bogus "bargains," the mendacious merchant meanwhile rubbing his hands and con-gratulating himself on the success of his advertising dodge. But he will look in vain for the return in force of our victimized friend. Day by day his business will fall off, and he will be pretty sure to learn in the end, by sad experience, that the community, credulous as it is, cannot be beguiled time after time into the same trap, baited with the same chaff.
