CLEVELAND IN 1892.

We cannot inaugurate the presidential campaign of 1892, and we would not if we could; but there are those who are constantly holding up Governor Hill as the presidential candidate of the National Democracy in 1892, and it may not be inappropriate for us to say that the voice of the North Carolina Democracy is not swelling the loud acclaim.

Whatever may be the personal merits of Governor Hill, or the soundness of his political opinions, it will not be forgotten that in the last presidential campaign Mr. Cleveland, the Democratic party, and the American people were sacrificed on the altar of Hill's ambition.

Day by day the wisdom of the Cleveland administration becomes more and more apparent. Mr. Harrison has the sagacity to see it, and Mr. Tracy follows in the footsteps of Mr. Whitney.

In the absence of exceptional causes, that now give no evidence of their existence, Mr. Cleveland will be warmly supported by a large and powerful following for the presidential nomination of 1892. The often repeated declaration that a defeated candidate for the presidency has never been renominated, is answered by the fact that Mr. Cleveland was the choice of the people and was defeated by the most corrupt methods known to the history of the country.

Mr. Cleveland's popularity is not diminished by his defeat.

It is very rarely that the rising sun is eclipsed by the setting sun, but at the late centennial celebration in the city of New York Mr. Cleveland not only out shone President Harrison, but he received more applause than Harrison, Hill and Depew combined.

There is another reason why Mr. Cleveland must be prominent, and that is the preponderating importance of the principles of which he is the embodiment. Whatever else may rest undisturbed, the people will demand a change in the tariff, and the re-establishment of that broad nationality that includes within its scope every State in the Union as equal in rights and privileges, and equal in dignity and honor. The great aim of the Cleveland administration was tariff reform; its sublime accomplishment was national unity, and around these the affections of the people cluster.

It is a long time to the meeting of the next Democratic National Convention, but there are duties to be performed in the interval, and not the least of these is the repeated presentation of the fundamental principles essential alike to the perpetuity of the government and the prosperity of the people.

TO THE POINT.

Gov. Fowle's Speech at the Southern Society Banquet.

RALEIGH, N. C., MAY 13, 1889.—There have been so many errors in the published report of the speech of Governor Fowle at the banquet given by the Southern Society in New York, that your correspondent has desired to see a correct report, and accordingly has procured a copy of the speech, which was as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen:—If there is one State in this American Union that does not know how to blow its own trumpet, it is North Carolina. [Applause.] And yet I tell you there are no people now within the city of New York that are prouder of the display which the Union made day before yesterday than those of the old North State. [Applause.] During this entire Centennial celebration there was one grievance that North Carolina had against New York, and only one, and I will tell you what it was: When you placed us in the procession, you put 16,000 men from New York in such a position that it took a long time for North Carolina to greet her sister South Carolina. [Laughter and Applause.] But North Carolina got there all the same. [Laughter and applause.] I want to say one thing to this grand New York Southern Historical Society. It did my heart good, my countrymen, when I saw the title upon the ticket that was sent to me only yesterday to meet you here tonight, and why? Because members of the Southern Historical Society, we wish you to have treasured upon your record every brave act of every Confederate soldier in the late war between the States, and for this reason; because we want to show you that the next time, if in our day, the United States of America is engaged in any struggle with any foe, that these same Southern soldiers intend to surpass their record, in behalf of our common country. [Loud applause.] New York may love this American Union, and Georgia through her distinguished sons, may boast of its devotion to this Union, but let me tell you that plain old North Carolina has within her breast an affection for this Union of our fathers that is second to no State upon the soil of North America. [Loud applause.] My countrymen, do you know why it is that we had such a grand celebration as this? I stood upon your streets and went in a carriage from one end to the other, and I gazed in the faces of a million of men, who prided themselves in the title of American citizens. [Applause.] Why is it that we had such a demonstration as this? I will tell you, sir, why. When the Southern States went from the Union there was one thing they carried with them. It was that grand, glorious instrument, that work of brave patriots and sagacious statesmen, that best model of civil government which human virtue or wisdom has ever devised—the Constitution of the United States. [Loud applause.] And when we returned again to this Union we found that same old glorious Constitution and at this day plain, honest North Carolina stands the peer and the sister of magnificent New York. [Applause.] There is one thing that has been in my heart ever since the war terminated, and I tell you my countrymen, my American countrymen, that on day before yesterday, for the first time, it seemed to me that before these eyes close in death they might see the desire of my heart fulfilled, and it was this. In English history, when the Wars of the Roses were over, the sons of Lancaster joined in praising the deeds of York, and the sons of York gloried in the manhood of Lancaster, and their deeds conjointly were weaved together in order to form a chaplet with which they might crown their old mother England. May the time come when the glorious deeds of the Union soldiers and the equally glorious deeds of the Confederate soldiers may be taken and weaved in one chaplet, with which we will crown all America.—[Applause.]

And when that time comes, then my countrymen, will come the day when the national mausoleum to be erected to our great leader, Abraham Lincoln [loud applause] will only be equalled by another monument erected to our Christian Southern leader, Robert Edward Lee. [Loud applause.] And then a monument erected by a grateful country to the large hearted, and honorable soldier, Ulysses S. Grant, [loud applause], will be equalled by America's monument to one of the greatest soldiers of modern times, Stonewall Jackson. [Loud applause.] When that time comes, and come it will, every one in this broad Union may take the poet's own words and say:

"The Union of lakes the Union of lands,
The Union of States, let none sever,
The Union of hearts the Union of hands,
And the flag of our Union forever."

(Three cheers and a tiger were given to the Governor at the conclusion of these well spoken and well received sentiments.)

Some of the newspapers have endeavored to cast reflection upon the delegation from North Carolina and the representation at New York, by saying that North Carolina was at "the tail end" of the procession and of affairs generally, because Gov. Fowle did not have to reply to a toast at the banquet. All the toasts were official ones. Governor Lee, as the representative of the "Mother of States," was the only Southern Governor to reply to a toast. Gov. Hill, of New York, was the only other Governor who spoke.—Wilmington Messenger.

Ex-President Andrew D. White, an eminent educator of New York, spent last winter in the South. He says: "I like the character of the people I met. Good feeling everywhere prevails. The South is heartily and thoroughly reconstructed. A great awakening in business is evidenced. There is immense development at railroad centers. Immigration is coming chiefly from the Northwest. Thousands of would-be settlers are in the South looking for suitable locations. There is a rapid advancement in the educational interests of the South."

A True Tonic.

When you don't feel well and hardly know what ails you, give B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) a trial. It is a fine tonic.

T. O. Callahan, Charlotte, N. C., writes: "B. B. B. is a fine tonic, and has done me great good."

L. W. Thompson, Damascus, Ga., writes: "I believe B. B. B. is the best blood purifier made. It has greatly improved my general health."

An old gentleman writes: "B. B. B. gives me new life and new strength. If there is anything that will make an old man young, it is B. B. B."

P. A. Shepherd, Norfolk, Va., August 10th, 1888, writes: "I depend on B. B. B. for the preservation of my health. I have had it in my family now nearly two years, and in all that time have not had to have a doctor."

Thos. Panik, Alapaha, Ga., writes: "I suffered terribly from dyspepsia. The use of B. B. B. has made me feel like a new man. I would not take a housand dollars for the good it has done me."

W. M. Cheshire, Atlanta, Ga. writes: "I had a long spell of typhoid fever, which at last seemed to settle in my right leg, which swelled up enormously. An ulcer also appeared which discharged a cup full of matter a day. I then gave B. B. B. a trial and it cured me."

If we would do more for others while we may, we should have less regrets, when too late, that more more had not been done when "it might have been."

DYSPEPSY.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle by R. N. Duffy, Wholesale Druggist, New Berne, N. C. Wholesale rates, $3.00 per dozen.

Many a man sets up a carriage only to find less of enjoyment in it than he has had in holding the ribbons from his "one hoss shay."

One of my children, a girl about nine years old, had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter. We had two physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise there was a marked improvement. We continued using this Balm, and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Ely Bros., I have been afflicted with catarrh. I purchased a bottle of your Cream Balm. It has effected a complete cure.—H. C. Abbott, 97 Grant Ave, Allegheny City, Pa. m13 2w
