Music from a lyre of gold.
Swiftly down the stream he glided,
Soft the purple waves divided,
And a rainbow arch abided
O'er his cauvae mowy fold,

Anxious hearts, with fond devotion, Watshed him salling to the coston, Praying that so wild commotion Midst the elements might rise; And he seemed some young Apollo Charming summer winds to follow, While the water-flag's corolla Trembled to his music-sight.

But those purple waves enchanted Rolled beside a city haunted By an awful spell that daunted Every comer to her abore;
Night shades rank the air encumbered, And pale marble statues numbered Lotos eaters, where they slumbered And awoke to life no more.

Then there rushed with lightning quick-

O'er his face a mortal sickness. And death-dews in fearful thickness
Gathered o'er his temples fair;
And there swept a mournful murmur
Through the lovely Southern summer, the beauteous pilot comer Perished by that city there

On its bosom, as before; But that vessel's rainbow banner

Greats no more the gay savannah, And that pilot's lute drops manna On the purple waves-no more

THE EDITOR.

If the lawyer slept in the editor's bed When no lawyer chanced to be nigh, And though he has written and naively said.

How easily editors lie, He must then admit, as he lay on that bed And slept to his heart's desire, Whate'er he may say of the editor's bed. Then the lawyer himself was the lier.
