JUDGE NOT!
 Judge not! Though clouds of seeming gull's may on thy forehead flame, For fate may show suspicious shade upon the brightest name.
 These clouds not tell what hidden chain of circumstance may Have wrought the sad result that takes an honest name away.
 Judge not!

JUDGE NOT!
 Judge not! The greatest criminal may rightfully deserve
 A chance to clear himself before a jury of his land.
 And surely one who later was known to break his pledged word Should not be hastily condemned to obnoxious noisance.
 Judge not!

JUDGE NOT!
 Judge not! These cannot tell how soon the look of bitter scorn May rest on thee, though pure thy heart as dewdrops in the morn; Then dost not know what freak of fate may place upon thy brow A cloud of shame or kill the joy that rests upon it now.
 Judge not!

JUDGE NOT!
 Judge not—but rather in thy heart let gentle pity dwell.
 Man's judgments err; but there is One who "doeth all things well." Throughout the voyage of thy life this precept keep in view—
 "Do unto others as thou wouldst that they should do to you!"
 Judge not!

JUDGE NOT!
 Judge not—for one unjust reproach an honest heart can feel As keenly as the deadly stab made by the pointed steel.
 The worm will kill the sturdy oak (though slowly it may die)
 As surely as the lightning-stroke swift rushing from the sky.
 Judge not!

Cause and Effect.
 Many things which seem mysterious, and serve to puzzle the wisest men, might be, if the cause and effect were understood, as easy of solution as the question in the following incident, which is related of Bafion, the great naturalist.
 One day he entertained a company of distinguished savants at dinner, and as the conclusion of which they all went out into the garden.

It was a very hot summer's day, in the centre of the grounds there stood on a pedestal a large glass globe, which one of the guests happened to touch with his hand, when he found, to his astonishment, that it was warmer on the shady side than on the side turned toward the sun.

He communicated this discovery to the other guests, who at once proceeded to verify the statement.
 What could be the cause?
 An animated discussion ensued, in the course of which every imaginable law of physics was made to account for the strange paradox.
 At length our scientists agreed that it must be so, owing to the laws of reflection, refraction, or exhalation, or some other law of physics with a long name.

The host was, however, not quite convinced, and, calling the gardener, he said to him, "Pray tell us why the globe is warmer on the shady side than on the side turned to the sun?"
 The man replied, "Because just now I turned it round for fear of its cracking with the great heat."

How They Vote in Greece.
 "Any man in Greece can be a candidate for any office," says Dr.
 Constantine, "and when a man announces himself as a candidate, the government must provide a ballot box for him. If ten men announce themselves as candidates for Mayor, a separate box is set up for each candidate and every voter must vote in each of the ten boxes."
 "Then each candidate would get the same number of votes, I should think?"

"That is possible, but I never knew it to happen. Let me explain a little further.
 "We vote with black and white balls. Each ballot is divided into a black and a white compartment with a funnel in the middle. Every voter is given white balls and black balls, and putting his hand down in the funnel, drops them as he chooses. A white ball is for and a black ball against a man. If the citizen wishes to vote for Mr. A, and for him only, he drops a white ball into his box and black balls into the other nine (there are ten candidates), or he can vote for two of the candidates—or for the whole set—if he chooses, his vote being really of no account in that case, of course. The man who has most white balls in his box is elected.
 When two representatives are to be elected, the man having the next highest number of white balls gets the second place, and so on.

A Woman's Discovery.
 "Another wonderful discovery has been made and that by a lady in this country. Disease fastened on her and for seven years she stood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved by taking first that she slept all night, and with one bottle has been completely cured.
