The Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. is now on the political rack. The question is whether a politician or a railroad man shall be selected by Governor Fowle to manage the property. President Bryan took the road when it was about to go to pieces, and has put it in fine financial and physical condition. Because he has not done this without paying for it, seems to be a cause of grievance on the part of those who want to get him out. If he has practically furnished a new railroad he must show an increased indebtedness to do so. He was fortunate to have such business connections as to be able to make the great improvement he has. Nothing succeeds like success. President Bryan has demonstrated that he understands railroad business, and has breadth of brain and nerve enough to dially invited to attend.

Now as to the fine financial condition of the road of which the North State speaks we can only say that it is in conflict with what Mr. Bryan himself said, under oath we are informed, before the can run through another year without

There has been so much claim set up for Mr. Bryan's successful management of the road, that it is well for Governor Fowle to look into the matter and to do in August with much anxiety. This is it in a business like way. Let an inrestigation be made by men entirely disinterested. No one will doubt that the road bed and track is in much but Mr. Bryan says this is not true, and Duffle, civil engineer. no one who is acquainted with the facts, will doubt but the increased indebtedness of the road is more than equivalent to the improvements. But how about the the test of a successful business management? It is said that the net earnings are less than they were the last year the road was run by Col. Whitford. If so where is the boasted financial suc- ries. cess? Suppose the owners of the North State were to conclude to improve their paper, and expend ten thousand dollars for the purpose and at the end of four years find their receipts less than before making the improvement, would they consider it a successful business management?

We presume Mr. Bryan is ready and willing to stand by his record, which if we understand it is:
