An invitation will be extended to the body to hold its next meeting at Morehead City, which we trust will be accepted. Complaints.
Elsewhere is a communication from Mr. J. M. Patrick of Lenoir Institute, complaining of the irregularity of his mail. We also have a complaint from a subscriber in Tuscarora saying that he had not received the WEEKLY JOURNAL for two weeks. We know the bundle for Tuscarora was marked and put in the office here on Wednesday. The new route agent on the road must of course have some little time to "get his hand in," but he must hurry up as people are very impatient in this progressive age.

Becham's Pills cure bilious and nervous life.

The Colored Exodus.

It is currently reported through the State papers that there will be a general emigration of colored people from North Carolina early this fall. We copy from the Baltimore Manufacturer's Record in this issue a well written article on this subject in which it is assumed that the removal of the colored people westward will prove a blessing in disguise to both them and the country which they leave. It also gives a true statement as to how interest in such a movement is worked up.

The JOURNAL has not offered advice to the colored people in this section on this matter, though we have been asked to do so several times. People who are of age, and are free, ought to know that wherever they go they must, in order to live honorably and be just to their neighbors, work and must learn to make a proper disposition of their earnings. As a rule the man who can not make a decent living on a farm in North Carolina can not do it anywhere in the United States, unless a change of locality will change the man. Occasionally we hear of a man who could do nothing in North Carolina, but went West or South and did well. This is the exception to the rule, and in nine cases out of ten the man's habits were changed with his removal.

The colored people have a perfect right to go West or anywhere else if they have the money to go with, or to go if they can do so without money, but we assure them that it will take just as hard work to get meat and bread there as it does here and more. We have never heard of hennings being peddled on the streets of any Western town at "five cents per bunch, ten on a bunch."

There are colored men in this section who are accumulating property, and plenty of them who are not accumulating; there are also white men who are not accumulating, nor would they if they were to go West or in any other direction. Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind. There is no place in the United States, where a livelihood can be obtained with less work than in Eastern Carolina. If there are any who want to work harder and live on less let them go.

Farmer's Annual Dinners.
For several years Dr. W. J. Jones of Goldsboro has given an annual dinner to his tenants on his farm in Jones county a few miles below Kinston, and he has doubtless seen the good effects of this endeavoring to stimulate a kindly feeling between landlord and tenant. It is an example that other farmers might follow to advantage. From the Kinston Free Press we get the following account of the last annual dinner given by Dr. Jones:

The writer in company with Mr. Louis Einstein had the pleasure last Thursday of attending the annual picnic at Dr. W. J. Jones' plantation, about five miles from Kinston, in Jones county. There were present besides the host, Dr. Jones, and his two sons Will and Street, of Goldsboro, and the tenants: Col. Jno. D. Whitford of New Berne, General Gaston Lewis, Mr. Sims Einstein and ex-Sheriff Grantham, of Goldsboro, Mr. R. M. Johnson of the Wilmington Messenger, Sheriff J. D. Sutton, Major W. J. Barre, Mr. Louis Einstein and the writer of Kinston.

Mr. Jones bought this large plantation, consisting of 2,220 acres, eighteen years ago, and has made it a custom to give his tenants and employes a dinner and good time generally every year about crop-laying-by time. The farm laborers always look forward to these feasts with a great deal of pleasure, and they as well as the few invited guests, always have a good time. Dr. Jones has the kindest of feelings towards his laborers, and they fully reciprocate that feeling. The colored people like to work for Dr. Jones—some of them have been on the plantation ever since he bought it.

Last Thursday just before dinner, all the laborers and gentlemen were gathered together and, upon motion of the host, Col. Whitford was elected president of the gathering. The Col. arose, thanked the assemblage for the honor bestowed on him and made one of the nicest and most appropriate speeches we ever listened to. He pointed out to the colored men that there were various ways by which people could be great—some were great scholars, others great scientists, lawyer, etc.—with a few rare exceptions the colored man could not be great in any of the professions, but he could be, many were, great as laborers—the colored man who beats another good laborer was a great laborer and got more pay than those who did less work.

Dr. Jones made a few remarks in which he paid a glowing tribute to Louis Saunders, an aged colored man, who had been with him for seventeen years, and who had proven faithful to every trust.
An adjournment to dinner was made. Gen. Lewis had prepared the barbecue, and the fine manner in which he prepares it is well known, and his reputation did not suffer on this occasion. The dinner, consisting of barbecue, chicken, vegetables, etc., was indeed an excellent one, and was done full justice to. The best of "good feeling" prevailed, and after dinner a number of gentlemen were called on and made remarks appropriate to the occasion.
A while after dinner the colored people, men and women, were gathered together and sang a number of songs.

An Inquiry.
MR. EDITOR:—It was, with some surprise, that I read the charges made by Mayor Williams against Mr. Simmons in your paper of Friday. Can it be true, Mr. Editor, that in 1886, when the people of Craven county were making such a gallant fight to free themselves from oppression, and obtain representation in the Legislature, Mr. Simmons was attempting to thwart their wishes and prevent the accomplishment of what they believed would advance their material interests on account of his hostility to Mr. Clark? All who are acquainted with the facts know that Mr. Clark was making, what, to him, was a very great sacrifice, simply to obey the call of the people of Craven county, and not for any selfish aggrandizement, or to gratify any personal ambition.

And what is strangest of all, the very movement which Mr. Simmons was opposing on account of hostility to Mr. Clark, was the only thing which rendered his (Simmons') election to Congress possible, as it was the immediate cause of the split in the Republican Congressional Convention. And again, can it be true that Mr. Simmons, since that time, has permitted his hostility to Mr. Clark, to manifest itself in various ways, as charged? Did Mr. Simmons attempt to thwart the will of the Democratic Executive Committee by having the names referred to by Mayor Williams, stricken from the list of Justices of the Peace, and others substituted, simply because the gentlemen, whose names were to be dropped, were the personal friends of Mr. Clark, and the list too—d Clark? If these are true, and the appointment of a President of the A. & N. C. R. should be made by the Governor, solely, upon political grounds, as some of Mr. Simmons' friends contend, certainly Mr. Simmons' conduct has not been such as to insure a very hearty support from the party in Craven county.

The facts in reference to these matters ought to be brought to the knowledge of the people, because they have a right to know how one who is seeking a position, upon the proper administration of which depends to a great extent their material prosperity has conducted himself in the past when their interests were involved. Certainly no man who will sacrifice the interest of the people for the gratification of a personal hostility, or the advancement of a selfish purpose, can or ought to be entrusted with the management of a public institution closely connected with the interest of the people.

Route Agents.
EDITOR JOURNAL:—I wish to call your attention to the neglect of the route agent on the A. & N. C. R. I have until recently received my mail on Fridays and Mondays from New Berne, as the institute mail leaves La Grange on the arrival of the mail from New Berne. Recently there is no certainty about it, as I often receive Friday's mail on the Monday following, and Monday's mail on Friday following. I suppose it results from the neglect of the agents to properly assort the mail. Is there no better material out of which to make postal officers under the present administration? If not, from all such good Lord deliver us. Truly yours,
J. M. PATRICK.
Institute, N. C., Aug. 9, 1889.

Attention Atlantics.
You will meet at your engine house tomorrow, Monday, morning at 8:30 o'clock sharp, in full uniform, white gloves. Send all baggage to the engine house.

A GUARDIAN ANGEL.

I sat in my chamber at midnight,
And my heart was sick with care;
And my thoughts turned back to the Northland
And to the loved ones there.
Turned back through years of wandering,
And sin and care and strife,
As the past arose before me—
The past of an ill-spent life.

Oh! that past, with its bitter lessons,
How it filled my soul with despair,
As I thought of those years of wandering
From a loving mother's care.
For my heart was weary of evil,
And the sorrow that comes in its train,
And I longed for a Guardian Angel
To carry me back again

To the loving Shepherd's pasture,
To feed by the waters still,
And with those living waters
My thirsty soul to fill.
I longed to eat at the table
Supplied with the bread of life,
And to wash in the crimson fountain
That cleanseth from sin and strife.

But the past has departed from me:
No more I hunger in vain;
My Guardian Angel has found me
And carried me back again
To the fountain of living waters
Whose streams forever glide
From 'neath the throne of the Living
God

In a broad, resistless tide.
And I bow before that Angel,
Tho' a woman only is she,
But a woman to lead men's sinful souls
To Christ and Eternity.
On a plane with my sainted mother
I place this Angel of mine,
And each is enhanced by the other
To a radiance near divine.

And I bow before two Angels
In reverence and love,
With a love that is only second
To my love for Him above
Who died, that I my sins might have
Each and every one forgiven,
And loving my friends with a perfect love.

Might meet them all in heaven.
